ZEPPELINS RAID LONDON

Many Killed As Germans Bomb British Capital

LOOK FOR BREMEN WITHIN 48 HOURS

New London, Ct., Aug. 25.—It is persistently rumored in waterfront circles today that the German submarine liner Bremen will dock at this port within forty-eight hours.

Officials of the Eastern Forwarding Company refuse to comment on the report.

German Liner Feared Capture by British Ship

The North German Lloyd liner Willehad, after anchoring outside New London harbor since late last night, entered the harbor there early today, completing a 148-mile trip from Boston.

The captain says he remained within the three-mile limit and denies reports that he went a long way from shore.

Collector McGovern said that Captain Jachens pleaded entire ignorance of his mission, saying that he was ordered to go to New London, and had obeyed, and that he did not know how long he would stay.

The Willehad came through the Race at New London at 9 a. m., and tugs of the T. A. Scott Company put out and towed her into the State pier, where a berth was reserved for her near the warehouse of the Eastern Forwarding Company, now under construction for the cargo of the submarine merchantman Bremen.

Mr. McGovern and Deputies Joseph Comstock and Jeremiah Dillon, with Captain Hinsch, of the Eastern Forwarding Company, Waldo Clark, resident engineer, and F. Valentine Chappell, secretary of the State Rivers and Harbors Commission, who are in charge of State pier, were the only persons permitted to board the steamer.

The customs officials went directly into conference with Captain Jachens.

FLIES GERMAN FLAG.

A battery of moving picture and camera men took their place among the crowd on the pier and were kept busy while the big steamer was getting into place. She entered the harbor flying the German colors, but these were taken down and the stars and stripes hoisted to the main mast and bow flagstaff.

The Willehad made the journey from Boston without mishap, though at one time she sighted a suspicious-looking vessel which sent her rearing in pursuit, ready to be headed if attacked.

Today in Boston port circles the rumor persisted that the other German steamers, Koln and Wittekind will, with the next monthly high tides, be floated into drydock and prepared for a journey to New London or other ports, or even to go to sea.

Like the Willehad, they are free to

Baltic Brings Story of British Trapping Bremen

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 25.—That the German trans-Atlantic freight submarine Bremen has been captured by the British and taken into the port of Dover, with two members of her crew of thirty-five dead from suffocation, was the information brought here today on the White Star liner Baltic. The informant refused to allow the use of his name.

According to the story, the Bremen became entangled in wire ropes and netting at the eastern end of the English Channel on August 2 and was taken into Dover harbor, five days later.

RUMORS OF CAPTURE.

The man giving the information is an officer of a British merchant vessel and the brother of an officer in the English navy.

For several days before the Baltic sailed from Liverpool there had been rumors of the capture of the submarine.

The bearer of the information finally got in touch with his brother, the naval officer, who confirmed the reports.

When the Bremen became entangled, it was said, she had evidently tried to free herself and when she was found by British destroyers her bow was near the surface but her stern was firmly held by the netting. The German seamen were unable to escape because the conning tower was under water.

The Bremen had been constructed for three days' continuous submersion and her enforced longer stay under the surface had used up all the oxygen, with the result that the surviving seamen were in deplorable condition.

TELLS OF RESCUE.

The work of cutting the submarine free from the entanglements was concluded on August 7.

The Bremen, the officer said, is 350 feet long, whereas her sister ship, the Deutschland is only 315 feet in length. The censor refused to allow the publication of the Bremen's capture, it was said, in order to mislead the Germans.

The Overseas News Agency of Berlin, in a dispatch sent out yesterday, stated that the Bremen did not sail from Germany for the United States until August 16.

MARY M. STARLINSKY, thirteen-year-old Mattapan girl, who says she was attacked while picking cherries.

YOUNG GIRL IS VICTIM OF ATTACK

Mary M. Starlinsky, thirteen, of No. 328 Oakland street, Mattapan, is ill in bed today, suffering from bruises and a severe nervous shock as the result of her experience yesterday when she is alleged to have been attacked by a man who gave the name of John F. Higgins, who will be arraigned in the West Roxbury court today.

Propped up in bed, still weak from the experience, the little girl told her story today:

"We are out picking rum cherries, my little brother Peter, my cousin Agnes Coubel, who is visiting us, and myself.

"A strange man came along and asked me if I lived on Savannah avenue. He spoke in such a rough voice that the other children were frightened and ran away.

"When he threw me down he hurt me pretty badly. He kept me there, beating me, for five minutes, I should say. Peter and Agnes were so small they couldn't do anything, so they just stood there.

"Finally he saw some one coming, I guess, and ran away as fast as he could go through the cemetery, dodging and jumping over tombstones as he went.

"I ran as fast as I could toward home. When I got to the corner of this street, outside the graveyard, I saw three men standing there. I told them about the man and what he looked like, and they ran after him. mother telephoned the police. After a long time they came around in the patrol wagon and carried me up to the court where that man was. The doctor gave me some medicine and then the judge asked me some questions and I came home."

A crowd stalked Higgins. He started to run and they followed him at a distance of 200 feet for two miles.

At Chandler street, South End, it was stated that a man by the name of John F. Higgins roomed there about a year ago, but that he gave up his room last Christmas and did not say where he was going. As far as is known by the people in the house, Higgins had no family.

GIRL OF 17 PARALYSIS VICTIM

Miss Burr, a Wellesley Student, Had Returned but a Week Ago to New York From College Town

Word came today from Gloversville, N. Y., of the death of a Wellesley College girl from infantile paralysis.

She was Miss Helen Burr, seventeen years old. She had been at Wellesley during the Summer, and returned to her home in Fultonville, N. Y., a week ago.

She was taken sick today at her home, and died after an illness of only four hours.

EIGHT NEW CASES.

Eight new cases of infantile paralysis, swelling the total number to 191 cases since August 1, were reported by the State Department of Health for the twenty-four-hour period ending at noon today.

The increase of the plague in Massachusetts is further evidenced by other statistics issued by the State Department of Health.

From January 1 to July 1 thirty cases were reported in this State. During July 107 cases were discovered, closely following the New York epidemic. The total number of cases this month is said to be the greatest ever recorded for a similar period in the history of the State.

One of the eight cases reported today was from North Adams, where federal and State health officials are united in a joint fight to stay the progress of the disease. Today's cases:

CASE IN BOSTON.

Lowell—Margaret Foye, No. 22 Edson street.

Pittsfield—James P. Sullivan, No. 226 South street.

Plympton—Mary L. Belviere, aged twenty-one months.

Southbridge—Rita Herber, No. 7 Sayles street.

Springfield—James Murray, No. 465 Allen street.

North Adams—William Compedelli, No. 1 Morgan avenue.

Cambridge—Edwin Bradinski, No. 131 Fifth street.

The eighth case is a Boston case, the name of which was withheld by the State Department of Health at the request of the Boston Health authorities.

The diagnosis of infantile paralysis in the case of Florence Smith of Lynn, which was reported on August 19, has been withdrawn.

In New York a decided drop in the number of new cases and deaths from infantile paralysis was reported today. There were only twenty-two deaths in the last twenty-four hours and ninety-five new cases, compared with thirty-one and 109 respectively for the previous day.

TRAINMEN REJECT NEW PLAN

Tell Wilson They Are Firm for His Original Proposal; Say Roads 'Manufacture' Sentiment

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 25.—The brotherhoods' representatives now in Washington conferring with President Wilson and the presidents and managers of the various railroads of the country in an effort to prevent a general strike, will not recede from their acceptance of President Wilson's plan to end the controversy. But under no circumstances will they make any further concessions to the railroads.

President Wilson was so informed by the grand officers of the brotherhoods at a conference in the White House today, which lasted for one hour and twenty-five minutes. While his Cabinet members "cooled their heels" outside his study, the President discussed the entire situation with the brotherhood leaders seeking to find whether there was not some other compromise plan that could be agreed upon which would force a speedy settlement.

The brotherhood men told the President that they and their associates had accepted his plan of an eight-hour day on a ten-hour basis of pay in good faith, abandoning all collateral questions, including the demand for overtime, and that they must now stand pat. If the roads will not yield they said, there was nothing for the men to do but order a general strike.

While the brotherhood men conferred with the President, the managers and executives of the railroads held their first secret conference in their headquarters in the Willard Hotel.

The conference between the President and the railway union officials

Nearly All Victims of Infant Plague Are Under Sixteen

New York, Aug. 25.

DR. EMERSON has announced statistics showing that practically all infantile paralysis patients are children under sixteen years. Of the 7,530 cases listed, only eighty-seven patients are over sixteen.

The weekly bulletin of the Health Department shows that of 841 fatal cases up to August 1, only 263 were those of persons of native born parents.

Mayor Mitchel's suggestion of a colony in Jacob Riis Park or other suburban property of the city for the after care of patients has been turned down by the committee on after care.

Sir John Maxwell Is Exonerated on Irish Executions

By International News Service.

Dublin, Aug. 25.—At the government investigation today into the shooting of the Sinn Fein sympathizers, Sheehy Skeffington, Fred MacIntyre and Thomas Dickson, Sir John Maxwell, the British commander-in-chief in Ireland, was exonerated of all responsibility. It was shown that Sir John did not arrive in Ireland until after the executions had taken place.

Timothy Healy, counsel for the relatives of Skeffington, charged the British authorities with trying to bury the executions from the public attention. In opening his case before the investigating commissioners Mr. Healy declared they were dealing with a matter "that will vibrate the country for centuries."

"If this had been done to British prisoners at Brussels the world would ring with it," he said.

6 BIG AIRSHIPS IN NEW ATTACK

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 25.—Zeppelin airships bombarded the outskirts of London early today, killing and wounding twenty-nine persons. The electric power station and the engineering works were damaged by bombs.

Six airships took part in the raid. Cities on the eastern coast were attacked as well as London, while one airship penetrated far inland. Ships off the coast were also attacked.

In the first official statement issued by the War Office no mention was made of the attack upon London, but a later statement issued this afternoon gave details of it.

Thirty bombs were dropped in the eastern counties, the official report says, but in that district there were no casualties, nor was any serious damage done.

The Zeppelin which reached the suburbs of London dropped bombs which resulted in the following casualties:

Killed, three women, three men and two children, seriously injured, three men and four women; slightly hurt, seven women, four men and three children.

Linger at Bar as Long as You Wish; Legal, Says Judge

That a man may spend as much time in a saloon as he desires and yet break no law by so doing was decided by Judge Burke in the Municipal Court today, when he found Charles Putnam of the South End, who was before him charged with being drunk and disorderly, not guilty.

Two police officers told Judge Burke that for the past six months Putnam had been loafing about the barrooms of the South End and had done no work.

"This is not evidence that he was disorderly," said Judge Burke. "On this uttering, the court said: "I know of no law that prevents a man from being idle as long as he wants to be. That is a conjunctive offence. He might have been idle, but there is no evidence that his being disorderly. He might stand around barrooms as long as he desires. That's no offence. I find him not guilty and order his discharge."

WILLEHAD SAFE IN PORT

go at any time by securing clearance papers.

FIRST TO GO TO SEA.

The Willehad was the first German vessel to venture to sea from American ports since the war began, except for the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which came to Boston from Bar Harbor, under escort of American naval vessels, and except for the merchant submarine Deutschland.

She exercised the utmost precautions in her advance, except when leaving Boston, while passing through the canal, and when entering New London, she displayed no flag.

Her commander was under orders to run the ship aground if there was danger of her capture. It was feared that unless this was done, British warships might venture into the territorial waters to seize her, while if she was run aground, they would not dare to stay in territorial waters long enough to drag her free, and she could be floated again.

The Willehad was berthed at Mc-Queston's Wharf, East Boston. She had been expected to sail at about 10 o'clock, but instead she slipped out without ostentation at a little before 5 o'clock.

THE TRIP TO THE CANAL.

She went out through the Narrows, past Point Allerton, and rounded the bell buoy off Harding's Ledge before turning southward along the shore. She passed Minot's Light a little after 8 o'clock, and then swung in closer to the shore.

From this point, her course was outside the three-mile limit for much of the journey to the canal.

She was four miles off shore when she was met off the Brant Rock wireless station, by a launch from the canal company.

Off Gurnet Light, at the entrance to Plymouth Harbor, she went inside the three-mile limit, but from that point to Manomet Point, she was outside the three-mile limit for most of the way.

As she approached Mary Ann's Rock, off Manomet Point, the first scare of the cruise developed. The Willehad, like other steamers, was supposed to go outside Mary Ann's buoy; but the sight of a suspicious looking little craft turned her inward, and off Centre Hill Point she turned and ran straight toward shore at top speed, prepared to run aground if it became necessary.

IT WAS ONLY A YACHT.

But the approaching craft was then identified as the yacht Mirvians, of W. W. Aldrich of Providence, and the Willehad swung out again, took a bearing for Sandwich, and made the run straight away, venturing five miles off shore.

During the entire cruise, the Willehad's anchors were ready to be let go at short notice.

But it was not necessary to anchor. The Willehad reached the Sandwich end of the canal at 9:40, and there Captain E. R. Geer, superintendent of the canal company, went on board and told the Willehad's commander that as the tide was running west in the canal, it would be necessary to wait two hours for slack water.

OBJECTS TO DELAY.

Captain Jachens of the Willehad made a vigorous protest. He said the delay would give enemy ships time to meet the Willehad between Buzzard's Bay and Point Judith, where she would again have to venture outside the three-mile limit.

Captain Geer said that couldn't be helped; that the Willehad could not negotiate the canal except at slack water. Accordingly it was nearly noon before the Willehad began her trip through the canal, and the journey through occupied about an hour and a half.

The canal has an average width of 90 feet and a depth at low water of 25 feet. The Willehad is 401 feet long, has a beam of 46 feet and a draught of 15 feet.

She proceeded slowly through the canal, one tug at her bow helping her progress slightly, and another at her stern ready to swing the big craft out of danger if she started to veer in the narrow waterway.

PASSES WRECK.

The most critical point in the passage came when the Willehad undertook to pass the submerged wreck of the collier William Gibbons, which still occupies about half the breadth of the canal.

At this point, the Willehad literally rubbed the lophins on the port side, while she cleared the submerged wreck by only seven feet. She barely crawled through the narrow opening. She emerged from the canal at 1:40 o'clock.

The Willehad picked her way down the north shore of Buzzards' Bay, keeping within the three-mile limit. From Sakonnet Point to Point Judith, she was protected by a thick haze that made objects invisible two miles away, and for much of that distance she was outside the three-mile limit.

Once safely past Point Judith, in Block Island Sound, she hugged the shore again till she came to Stonington.

AROUND FISHER'S ISLAND.

There she turned out to round the southern side of Fisher's Island, and so rounded Race Rock, and came to anchor there at 11 o'clock last night, to wait for morning before going up the harbor to New London.

Aboard the Willehad during her dash was Captain Joseph M. Lewis of Boston, together with the Willehad's crew of sixty men. The ship carried no cargo, but took on enough ice, provisions and such matters to care for the crew of the Bremen while that craft is in this country.

Captain Jachens during the trip and at its close was repeatedly asked the object of the transfer.

He insistently denied that it had any connection with the coming of the Bremen. He said it was simply to save dockage charges.

Nevertheless it is believed that the plan is to make New London a permanent port for German merchant submarine traffic with this country.

It was pointed out that German submarines could run clear into Long Island Sound submerged, without danger of capture, where at Baltimore they were practically forced to come outside the three-mile limit on the surface.

That the Willehad will be used as a "mother ship" for submarines here is the general belief.

WAR SUMMARY

The French have captured the whole of Maurepas, and today announce that they maintained their hold upon the village against a determined German counter-attack.

Their capture of Maurepas was the result of three separate attacks, or groups of attacks. They first penetrated the village some ten days ago; they captured about half of what remained some four days later; and yesterday new attacks carried them through the village to a line 200 yards beyond.

It is interesting to note that the French advance at Maurepas since July 22 has been just a mile in extent. To the southward, while the advance cannot be definitely located on the map, it is in the vicinity of two miles deep since the same date.

The towns immediately before the allies are now Guillemont—where some British have penetrated the outskirts—Combles, a mile ahead of the French advance, and Clery, likewise about a mile ahead of the French.

The French advance in this locality will accompish nothing of more than local importance till it cuts the straight road from Bapaume to Peronne, about two miles ahead of the present French positions. Combles is only a cross roads town, through which runs a railroad already in the possession of the allies to the north and south, and so useless.

Unofficial advices from Paris have it that the French have opened a major bombardment on the line from Estrees to Lassigny. This is a front thirty miles long. Estrees is five miles southwest of Peronne, at the point where the French salient strikes into the German lines toward Peronne. Bombardment to the southward may well indicate a French plan for a serious offensive in that region. The situation is worth watching, for a French move there would be good strategy.

At Verdun, the Germans yesterday tried by a surprise attack to reapture Fleury, but failed. Though the German attacks continue here, and though the offensive, in general, rests with the Germans in this locality, the power of the Teutonic assault has for a time been decreasing. Whether or not this is merely temporary is yet to be seen.

The Russians made no move in Poland or Galicia yesterday, but north of Lake Van in the Caucasus they recaptured Mush and drove back the threatening Turkish army there.

In the Balkans, the Bulgarian troops have driven back Greek forces which were fighting them without authority from the Greek government. Otherwise the fighting thus far has been a standoff.

NEW GAINS MADE BY BRITISH

By FREDERICK PALMER,
Accredited Correspondent with the British Army of the Press of the United States.

At the British Front in France, Aug. 24, via London, Aug. 25.—There has been murderous work on both flanks, where, with every usage of British progress, the fighting seems to become more bitter and the artillery fire hotter.

On the left, the Germans hold to Thiepval, and on the right, they cling to Guillemont, which, of all the ruined villages, is now the most completely pestle-mixed by shell fire.

Last night the repulse of the German attempt to drive the British out of the edge of Guillemont and the neighboring stone quarry was one of the bloodiest days the war began.

FURTHER PROGRESS.

Tonight the British have been making further progress east of Delville woods, tightening still closer the pincers on Ginchy and Guillemont.

This afternoon the British pressed forward another lap towards Thiepval, and observers witnessed another artillery curtain of fire which utterly silenced the machine guns as the charging British picked their way among the shell craters for 400 yards up the hillside and entered a German trench, sending back the usual number of prisoners.

It was all seen as clearly as if on a stage from the gallery, even to the detail of men standing on the edge of the trenches throwing bombs as one might toss biscuits into a basket.

Clearing out snipers and plodding ahead with their supplies of bombs and carrying light machine guns, that persistent line of infantrymen, under cover of the continuous blasts of their own guns and in the midst of bursting shells from the German artillery, never faltered, but reached the very top of the ridge, at one point along a front of 1,000 yards.

RAIN OF GREAT SHELLS.

They were within only 500 yards of the pulverized remains of what was once the village of Thiepval, which has become the most redoubtable of names to hundreds of thousands of men.

Meanwhile, the British kept on sending fifteen-inch shells, into the Thiepval area and German dugouts, which lie deep under the wreckage of the houses and spouts of smoke and dust rose to heights of 200 feet and what looked like bodies of men or sections of timber were tossed about.

British Forging Ring Around Combles

By SIDNEY B. CAVE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug. 25.—The circle of steel which the British are closing around Thiepval, and the ring which the British, in conjunction with the French, are forging around Combles, have been drawn tighter as the result of operations on the Somme front last night.

Important gains were recorded in the official report issued by the War Office tonight.

The British advanced another 100 yards along the Longueval-Flers road, capturing eight officers and 179 men.

The British forces driving on the German position at Thiepval have made further progress, capturing 193 additional prisoners. East of Hardecourt woods, the British have extended their lines until they join the French positions north of Maurepas, the communication says.

Further Progress Is Made by Italians.

By International News Service.

Rome, Aug. 25.—Further progress for the Italians on the slopes of Monte Cauriol was reported by the Italian war office today. In the Carnic Alps, the Austro-Hungarians directed an attack against the Italians at Valle d'Inferno Pass, but were repulsed.

Artillery duels are in progress in many sectors of the battle line. The war office report reads:

"In the Passo Alpe densa mist interfered with artillery activity yesterday. We have made further progress on the slopes of Monte Cauriol. Forty prisoners were taken there.

"In the upper Degano Valley and the Hut Valley hostile batteries are violently active against our positions.

"We repulsed a small attack at Valle d'Inferno Pass. There is no change in the Gorizia area or on the Carso plateau. The Austro-Hungarians are again shelling Gorizia and the Isonzo Bridges."

America Destined to Rule Seas; Good Start Is Made, Says Dewey

By International News Service.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 25.—"America is destined eventually to rule the seas."

That is the answer of Admiral George Dewey to everything that has been said in recent months for and against the upbuilding of the navy. It is his final answer also to the criticism of his recent utterances by Representative Augustus P. Gardner of Massachusetts.

Being predicted that America would be mistress of the seas, the Admiral added:

"And why should this not be so? This bill as it leaves the Senate makes us a good second—that is a good second.

"But we are the richest nation in the world. We have immense coast lines—stretches that must be defended.

"We have our foreign possessions increasing as the years slip by which must be protected.

"We should be second to none if we are to maintain the position that previously must be ours.

ENEMIES CONFOUNDED.

Admiral Dewey refused to comment on the specific criticisms in a recent interview by Representative Gardner. Speaking of the naval appropriation bill as passed by the Senate, he said:

"This bill is the finest that ever has been passed by any Congress. It meets squarely every immediate exigency. If we have enemies, secret enemies, we have confounded them by a great patriotic step.

"Look at the provisions of this bill. It gives us four battleships at once, and we are to have six more within three years. If it has done nothing else in the way of naval enlightenment, the European war has taught one lesson, and that is that the battleship still is, and will probably remain for a very long time, the principal reliance of navies.

OTHER STRONG ADJUNCTS.

Other strong adjuncts to our fleets we must have. Submarines, battle and scout cruisers all have their places in naval warfare. But no nation, after the lessons taught by the war abroad—by the Skagerrak fight, for instance—can pin its faith on them.

We are to arm these battleships with sixteen-inch guns. Think of it. Sixteen-inch guns, the greatest in the history of naval warfare. It would seem almost as if the possibilities of tonnage and armament are unlimited, but that fact is yet to be determined. As every recent development indicates, naval predominance must be determined on the high seas. America needs many more such ships, many more even than are provided for in the Senate bill.

We are to have four battle cruisers at once, and within three years we will have two more. Battle cruisers are an absolute necessity, but we must not overlook the undisputed fact that the Skagerrak fight proved conclusively that the battle cruiser cannot stand up and give successful battle against the greatdreadnought.

There is no present evidence that the submarine is, or is to become, the supreme instrument of naval warfare.

GERMANS FAIL IN ATTEMPT ON MAUREPAS

By CHARLES P. BERTELLI.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Aug. 25.—Attempts by the Germans to recapture Maurepas on the Somme front and Fleury on the Verdun front have been repulsed by the French, the War Office stated today in its official communique.

North of the Somme the Germans directed a fierce bombardment against Maurepas, which was taken by the French in a series of powerful attacks on Thursday. Under this rain of shells the French troops consolidated their new position in preparation for the German counter-attacks, which they expected to follow.

After the cannonade the German infantry was sent forward against the French lines stretching south from Maurepas, but were driven back in spite of the determination with which the assault was pressed home.

The total number of prisoners taken by the French in the past twenty-four hours is 350.

Maurepas lies just west of the main highway running from Combles to Peronne and about one-half a mile east of the railway lying between the same two towns. It is about four and one-half miles from Peronne and about a mile and one-half from Combles.

East of the Meuse the Germans made a dash against the French holding the ruined village of Fleury, but the attack was completely repulsed, the communique says.

The text of the communique follows:

"North of the Somme our troops have consolidated the ground taken by us during the night north and northeast of Maurepas. South of the village the Germans made a violent counter-attack, but were checked by our artillery fire and the fire of our machine guns.

"Hill No. 121 (south of Maurepas) has been occupied by our troops.

"The enemy was not able to come near our lines at any point and suffered severe losses.

BULGARS DRIVE GREEK ARMY BACK

By International News Service.

Salonica, Aug. 25.—Greek troops that are fighting with the British and French in an effort to check the advance of the Bulgarians through Greek Macedonia have been forced to fall back, in the region of Lake Tahinos, after suffering heavy losses.

Dispatches from the front held by the allies' right flank told today of violent fighting in that district, where the Bulgarians have been reinforced by hordes of Comitadjis (Bulgarian irregulars).

Six hundred irregulars entered the town of Prosenik and seized large quantities of Greek army stores, after which they burned the place. Then they occupied Djoumaya.

(Prosenik is six miles northwest of Seres and lies on the Salonica-Constantinople railroad. Djoumaya, or Dzuma, is three miles northwest of Prosenik and is about a mile east of the Struma river.)

Semi-official reports from the Struma front state that the Greeks are still contesting stubbornly every inch of ground. The defence of the Greek soldiers is being made in violation of an order sent by King Constantine to the Greek commander, Colonel Christodoulos. The Greek commander has gone so far as to summon reservists to the colors, although he has not been warranted to do so by the general staff.

U. S. WILL PRESS PROTEST ON TRADE BLACKLIST BY BRITAIN

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Following the demand for a speedy reply to its protest against further interference with mails between neutral countries and the United States, this government will press in sharp terms for immediate action on its boycott demands.

The conference now in progress here between Secretary of State Lansing and Ambassadors Page and Sharp, home on "vacation leave" from London and Paris respectively, has placed the United States in possession of new and important facts in both cases. This information shows that the situation is becoming more and more critical, going very close to an organized conspiracy against American business interests.

When Secretary Lansing conferred with the American ambassadors he developed the fact that the complaint already filed with his department and the Department of Commerce, and carefully guarded from publicity, seem only to scratch the surface of the situation.

The great New York banking interests, the Secretary has learned, have been forced to abandon nearly all of their plans for financing upon a large scale international trade with neutral countries because of the combined Anglo-French boycott on American merchants and interference with the mails.

Says Greek Government Has Lost Control.

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 25.—Owing to the refusal of the Greek generals to evacuate Eastern Macedonia and hand over the forts to the Bulgarians, the Greek government has informed Germany that it is no longer master of the situation, says a dispatch transmitted by the Rome wireless service today. It adds that Germany therefore upon ordered the Bulgarians to discontinue their advance and evacuate the occupied Greek territory.

The information conveyed in the Rome dispatch is contradicted by messages from Salonica, which state that the Bulgarians are still trying to drive forward farther into Greece.

All of Northern Greece has now become a vast battlefield. If reports of the arrival of Turks in the Balkans are correct there are solid rows of twelve armies now at grips in Macedonia. On the entente side there are British, French, Russian, Italian, Serbian, Montenegrin, Greek and Albanian soldiers. Arrayed against them are Germans, Austro-Hungarians, Bulgarians and Turks.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and for this purpose nothing is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

COE FOR FEDERAL MILITIA

Complete Federal control of all State militia forces was advocated by General Charles H. Cole, former adjutant-general of the Massachusetts militia, in a speech this afternoon before the Old Colony Club at Buzzard's Bay.

"The only fair and proper way, both from an economical and a military standpoint, is for all organizations for national defence to be maintained, officered, paid for, controlled and trained, both in time of peace and time of war, by the national government alone," General Cole said.

Having reviewed the call to arms in the Mexican crisis, General Cole added:

"The National Guard did pretty well, when you consider the system under which they worked; but the system is very much out of date.

"The system is one which bases its national defence on a body of partially trained citizen soldiers, who in time of peace are sustained largely by the different States. And what has happened in the last three months will always happen under such a system.

"The present system is also unfair to the different States. Massachusetts spends $500,000 a year for the support and maintenance of her National Guard, some of the Southern States pay only $25,000 or $30,000, and the State of Nevada pays nothing."

Although General Cole is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, the Old Colony Club meeting was non-partisan. Senator Lodge was among the speakers.

SUNFLOWER GROWS FROM TOP OF TREE

William Ronan of No. 831 Ashmont street, Dorchester, has a magnificent sunflower growing from the top of an apple tree in his front yard. The discovery was made today when a crowd gathered in front of the Ronan home and looked upward at the beautiful flower. Ronan wishes all the glory on a bird that he thinks must have carried the seed there in the thrips.

VOTE TO ELIMINATE TAX ON POLICIES

Washington, Aug. 25.—The Democratic members of the Senate Finance committee at a meeting this afternoon voted to eliminate from the revenue bill the provision for a stamp tax on insurance policies. The action was taken following a deluge of protests from all parts of the country.

Norma Mack Flies in Big Army Aeroplane Over Niagara Falls

Miss Norma Mack, daughter of Democratic National Committeeman Norman E. Mack, and Phil Rader, with whom she glided over Niagara Falls at a 78-mile-an-hour clip in an aeroplane. She is the first woman to accomplish the daring feat.

Buffalo, Aug. 25.—First of her sex to spiral over Niagara Falls in an aeroplane, Norma Mack, daughter of Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, Democratic National Committeeman, was a passenger in a machine piloted by Lieutenant Ira A. Rader. Lieutenant Rader dipped over the brink of the great cataract at nearly eighty miles an hour.

"It rides smoother than an automobile," remarked Miss Mack. "I'm going to take a course now. I wasn't a bit afraid," she added as she removed her helmet and goggles and ran to her father and mother, who saw her make the ascent and descent. From the aerodrome to the cataract and back is thirty-nine miles. Lieutenant Rader drove the distance in twenty-two minutes.

Miss Harriet Mack, also a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack, was a passenger in a machine driven by Major W. M. Campbell of the British Army.

Miss Norma Mack and Lieutenant Rader encountered a stiff breeze on their trip to the falls, which became a heavy wind on their return trip. She said she felt "sort of dizzy" when the big army plane began to spiral over the falls.

Franco-British Agreement Upon Financial 'Drive'

London, Aug. 25.—The premiers of Great Britain and France, the finance ministers of the two nations, and representatives of their financial kindred interests met at Calais yesterday and reached an agreement on important financial matters, it was officially announced today.

"A conference was held yesterday at Calais," says the statement, "between the French and British governments. A complete agreement was reached on all subjects with which the conference dealt. An arrangement was concluded regarding payments abroad and the maintenance of exchange between the two countries.

"The French government was represented by M. Briand, president of the Council of Ministers; M. Ribot, Minister of Finance, accompanied by M. Pallain, governor of the Bank of France, and M. Marjorie and O. Homberg.

"The British government was represented by Premier Asquith, Reginald McKenna (Chancellor of the Exchequer), Edwin Samuel Montague (Minister of Munitions) and Thomas McKinnon Wood (Financial Secretary to the Treasury), accompanied by the chief justice, the governor of the Bank of England and Sir Maurice Hankey."

THE BOSTON LADY COULD NOT SLEEP

Miss Sarah McPhee, of No. 22 Olney St., Tells How Plant Juice Has Benefited Her.

At this time of the year our bodies as well as our homes need a thorough house-cleaning. The headache, dizziness, bloating of the stomach, coated tongue, general "run-down" condition or any of the symptoms of sickness that you are experiencing now, are Nature's signals that the organs of your body need an overhauling and toning up. There is no remedy on the market that can accomplish this as well as Plant Juice, the new herbal stomach remedy. Its action is remarkable in all cases where the run-down system requires nourishment, or where the system is weakened by liver, kidney or bladder troubles.

Recent testimonials from local people have proven that this notable remedy has been remarkably successful as a germ-destroyer and tissue-builder, and a builder-up of weak people. For instance, Miss Sarah McPhee of No. 22 Olney street, a popular young lady of this city, stated:

"I have had stomach trouble, which took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia, for the past five years. My food fermented in my stomach and formed gas and a heavy, bloated condition in the pit of my stomach. I had no appetite and had to be very careful what I ate, as I would suffer much distress. I had pains all over my body and was so nervous I could not sleep at night and would be awake for hours at a time. I had headaches and was very dizzy at times. I had tried many different medicines without relief. At last, through the advice of a friend, I began to take Plant Juice, and it seemed to be just the medicine I needed to build my system up, which it has certainly done in a great measure, to my satisfaction and surprise. I can now eat any kind of food I want and am able to digest it; sleep well at night and have no more aches or pains, and am glad to recommend Plant Juice for what it has done for me."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton stores, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

U. S. HELPS ANOTHER GIRL SLAVE VICTIM

By International News Service.

New York, Aug. 25.—The scope of the white slave investigation in this city may be broadened as the result of a conference held today by District Attorney Swann from Giacomo de Pasquale of Providence, R. I.

The writer said his eighteen-year-old daughter had been lured away from home and from the description given the suspected man was recognized as a notorious white slave agent who has been operating in New England.

Gustave Kugelman, who was arrested as a result of the story told by Katherine Kooperman, a stenographer, was arraigned today for pleading, but the proceedings went over until Monday. Bail was fixed at $10,000.

Detectives who have been investigating Kugelman's past, say that he has a scandal, having married a Brooklyn girl without securing a divorce from his first wife, who was Miss Ella Beckett of Atlanta, Ga.

Catherine Kauffman, who, it is charged, was ruined by Kugelman, pointed him out in the home of his wife at No. 2949 West First street, Coney Island, to Detective McGlynn, who made the arrest.

SUPPORTED BY GIRL.

Kugelman was formerly a traveling salesman for a wholesale cloak and suit manufacturer, but for the last three years he has been supported by the salaries of Miss Kauffman. She led a double life. During the day she was a stenographer in the office of an insurance company—at night she paraded Broadway. She not only gave the money she made as a white slave to Kugelman, but also gave him the salary that she earned as a stenographer. He gambled the money away at faro and on the race tracks.

Unlike white slavers of the Yushe Rotvin and Sam the Peddler type, Kugelman treated the girl kindly, professed he loved her and held before her at all times the illusion that some day he would make her his wife. She would have been content if she had not discovered that Kugelman had used $100 she had given to him to spend on his honeymoon trip with a Brooklyn girl he had married.

CONSTANTLY WANTED MONEY.

Miss Kauffman told her story to Assistant District Attorney Smith. She is tall and slender, with an exquisitely moulded figure, regular features of Grecian type and large, black eyes that fairly blazed with hate every time she mentioned the name of her discarded "suitor."

She produced hundreds of letters received from Kugelman while he was out of the city attending race track meetings in Cuba, New Orleans and other parts of the country. These letters all contained appeals for money and instructions to be careful lest she be arrested.

One of the letters, dater December 9, 1915, from the Hotel Sevilla, Havana, Cuba, read in part:

Do the best you can and follow my instructions. If you do well, and I can afford it, I will let you come here after New Year's. Send me all the money you possibly can every day and the weekly money on Friday. Send it in your lunch hour. Try your best and don't gossip; business before pleasure.

"I received a good education," said Miss Kauffman. "I graduated from the public school, attended Washington Irving High School, but instead of graduating then there I left to go to a business college.

MET HIM WHEN NINETEEN.

"I met this man Kugelman first in November, 1913, by chance. He introduced to him by a girl friend and we went together to the Hamilton Theatre. I was living in the Bronx with my parents and spent much of my time with a cousin. I was nineteen years old and earned ten dollars a week as a stenographer. We kept company for about a year. Under promise of marriage I listened to his pleading in November, 1914. I learned soon afterward that my fiance while absent from me for a few weeks was married."

FOR SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE

An informal decision to authorize Governor McCall to call a special session of the Legislature has been reached by the members of the Governor's Council, it became known today.

The Councillors are ready to vote for a special session at the Council meeting Wednesday.

Although the Supreme Court will not meet until September 5 to decide the Suffolk reapportionment contest, the councillors are anxious to act soon to give the authority to Governor McCall in order that the special session —if a session is deemed necessary— may not be delayed.

Governor McCall, who is now in the Adirondacks, is expected back Tuesday. He will probably attend Governor's Day at the Barnstable Fair, August 30.

Acting Governor Coolidge and staff went to Fredericksburg today to witness the target practice of the Coast Artillery Corps.

8TH REGIMENT TO BE PAID ON PROTEST

By FREDERICK A. WARD.

El Paso, Texas, Aug. 25.—Word has been received here that the Eighth would finally be paid off. This news has caused much rejoicing. The Fifth was paid some time ago, but lack of funds kept the men of the Eighth from receiving their money. The regiment will be paid off in the following order, field and staff officers, headquarters, Second Battalion, Third Battalion and First Battalion.

Lieutenant Walter W. Austin has been appointed prison and police officer for the regiment. This detail is a new one for the regiment, but an officer acts in this capacity in all the regular regiments. Sergeant James H. Brown of Company D has been detailed provost sergeant in charge of the prisoners.

Privates Fletcher S. Hyde, Kenneth G. Macauley and E. Langley of Company K of Somerville have been promoted to corporals.

William E. Olm, sergeant first class, hospital corps attached to the regiment, has been furloughed to his reserve and has left for Boston.

Work on the new mess halls is being rushed to completion, and within a day or two all will be completed. Many of the companies are planning to equip the building as club rooms for their men, with magazines, books, pianos and other things to add to their comfort.

Several men have applied for discharges under the school and college act, which allows all men who attend school or college to be discharged September 1.

MAN BADLY BURNED BY BOILING WAX

Mrs. McMillin Cause of Beating of Society Youth as Hotel Masher

Mrs. Benton McMillin, wife of the United States Minister to Peru and former Governor of Tennessee, who innocently became the central figure in an unpleasant incident in the grill room of a hotel that resulted in the beating of Alexander Carver, a rich young society man of Yonkers, N. Y.

New York, Aug. 25.—A slight difference of opinion that left Alexander Carver, one of Yonkers' wealthiest and most fashionable young men, in bandages, and caused the appearance in the Bronxville Police Court of Mrs. Benton McMillin, wife of the United States Minister to Peru, occurred in the Hotel Gramatan, Bronxville, Wednesday night.

Accompanying Mrs McMillin to court was Bernard F. Bogy, a St. Louis millionaire, and his son, Bernard, Jr. Through his bandages, Carver told Judge Olson that for no cause he could ascribe, Bogy, Sr., attacked him in the grill room of the Gramatan. Bogy declared he struck Carver because Carver insisted on flirting with Mrs. McMillin, and addressing remarks to her even after having been warned.

DENIES FLIRTING.

Carver, who is only nineteen years old, insisted that he had not only not flirted, but that he didn't know there was any such person as Bogy until he was struck on the back of the head with something that left him unconscious on the hard stone floor.

Carver's friends, Leonard Beekman, a tennis player; Harry Gordon and a lawyer named Suter, testified Carver to a doctor's office. Carver says that while he was there Bogy, Jr., came to him and offered his $25 to forget all about the unhappy affair. Bogy, Jr., says that Carver's friends insisted on $100, but that a compromise was arranged for $50.

SAYS SHE FLED.

Mrs. McMillin, who is a guest in the Gramatan, says that she does not know just what happened and that she left when the unpleasantness began.

Bogy, Sr., says that he did only that which any regular man would have done; that he had just sat down at the table occupied by Mrs. McMillin and her brother, Thomas Foster of New Orleans, when he saw Carver's gesticulations. He says that he believed the gesticulations aimed at Mrs. McMillin, remonstrated with Carver, and when Carver persisted, struck him.

Judge Olson found out that Carver, the Bogys and Mrs. McMillin were not at all anxious to press any charges. All of them made it plain that they wanted to get away from there as rapidly as motor cars would carry them.

WOUNDED FRENCH PLEDGE U. S. SUPPORT

A letter written by Mrs. Gilbert E. Jones, an American worker in the Paris office of the American Fund for French Wounded, tells how the wounded soldiers in a hospital cheered the announcement of a comrade who said in case of need he stood ready to cross the ocean to fight for this country.

"The letter has been received at the New England branch of the society at No. 304 Boylston street.

"When I told the men that the Americans wanted to help them," the letter reads, "and that I had come to find out what they needed, the tears came to their eyes.

RUSSIANS CHECK NEW OFFENSIVE

By International News Service.

Petrograd, Aug. 25.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg's counter offensive against the Russians between Vilna and the Galician frontier has been checked at every point.

Northwards of the Lida-Molodetschno railroad the Germans attacked, using poison gas, the Russian War Office announced today, but this assault, as well as others made further south, were all repulsed by the Russians.

In the region of Lake Van, in Armenia, the Russian offensive is continuing successfully and at some points the Turks are in precipitate flight.

The following is the text of the official report:

"A German gas attack north of the Lida-Molodetschno railway was repulsed. The enemy attacked south of Tsirin, but was checked. In the direction of Kovel (the German base in Volhynia) the Austro-German attempts at an offensive failed.

"Various front-to-front offensive is continuing in the region of Lake Van. In the direction of Mosul we are pursuing the disorganized Turkish forces."

Although the official report made no mention of fighting in Galicia, military critics believe that great battles are in progress in the Carpathians, where the Russians are fighting for mountain passes.

Mostovaya, mentioned in the report, is sixty-six miles southeast of Vilna. Lida is fifty-one miles south of Vilna.

SENATE TO CONSIDER DANISH PURCHASE

Washington, Aug. 25.—The Senate foreign relations committee renewed consideration of the Danish treaty for the purchase of Denmark's West Indian possessions today. The committee had before it data furnished by Secretary of State Lansing showing the concessions to private interests involved in the treaty.

Although there has been some opposition to ratification on account of the concessions, leaders today predicted Secretary Lansing's data would remove much objection. If the treaty can be taken up without seriously delaying adjournment, it will be voted on this session.

Professor Hill's Will Provides for His Housekeeper

Professor George Anthony Hill, a former member of the Harvard faculty, left the bulk of his estate to his housekeeper, Mrs. Annie Manger, in his will, which has been filed for probate.

Mrs. Manger was first known to Professor Hill as caretaker of his suite of rooms in Fairfax Hall, one of the Harvard dormitories. Here he resided for the fourteen years between 1900 and 1914. Then Professor Hill bought a house at No. 12 Mendy avenue, Watertown, which was furnished by Mrs. Manger, and in which Dr. Hill rented two rooms.

Mrs. Manger lives at that address with three grown-up children and her aged mother. Under the terms of the will she inherits the house and the income from a large trust fund during the remainder of her life in case she does not re-marry.

How Baron Astor Blushed Over His 'Supporters'

Even Lords wear 'em; yes, even Lords of American birth and fortune. But sometimes they're bally embarrassing, don'cherknow. If you don't, Baron Astor do—now. The story is in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

NEW DISSENSION AMONG R. R. HEADS OVER EIGHT-HOUR DAY

was reported to have been somewhat animated. All of the brotherhood representatives united in telling the President that the railroads had gone to "the most unfair" lengths to manufacture apparent sentiment throughout the country against his proposed basis of settlement.

In proof of this charge W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, filed with the President copies of a telegram from F. T. Bawdy of Spokane, Washington, declaring that S. L. Derrence, superintendent of the Northern Pacific had sent all agents of that road a message ordering them to have as many farmers, stock raisers, dairymen and merchants in their district wire the President demanding that he insist that all questions under dispute, including hours and wages, be settled by arbitration and that he abandon his own proposal of settlement.

PAID BY ROAD.

The message also read:

"These telegrams are to be paid for from station funds and statement sent me for voucher your credit. Might be well to have some of the prominent signers send message to their Congressmen and Senators in Washington in addition to those sent to President Wilson. This is very important and must be given preference over normal business."

Lee told the President that this proved conclusively in his opinion that the messages reaching Washington endorsing the position of the railroad heads were "manufactured." He also said that all of the committeemen were receiving demands from their locals either to stand pat on the President's original proposition or to break off negotiations, if the roads do not yield and go through with the original strike program.

The President made no new suggestions to the brotherhood chiefs, but sounded them out on a proposal that had been made to him by certain of the railway executives, which would provide for acceptance of the eight-hour day, but would make the basis for payment the present compensation for nine hours instead of ten, as at present.

DID NOT PRESS IT.

This would have the effect of "splitting the difference," and would save the railroads half of the amount it was figured that the President's plan would cost. It is understood that the President simply suggested this proposition to the four brotherhoods, but did not press it when he found that they considered it entirely out of the question.

The President told the men of the various conferences he has held with the railroad chiefs and counselled the utmost patience. He made it plain that all the efforts to bring about a peaceful settlement would be ruined if the "hot heads" were permitted to assume control of the situation. When the brotherhood leaders left the White House they told the President that they would report to the full committee all that had transpired and would keep in close touch with the White House.

In their secret conference in their hotel the railway presidents and managers threshed out the situation. Radical differences of opinion exist between the railway executives, as at today's meeting, at which for the first time all outsiders were barred, was an effort to see whether united action could not be forced and the present aimless milling ended.

After receiving a report from the leaders on their conference with President Wilson, the 640 chairmen representing all of the railway employes' unions adjourned until tomorrow.

A Real Artist's Model Tells Truth at Last

"Billie" Scott, one of our most pictured and painted young ladies, describes the REAL trials of one who poses for masterpieces — in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

SEATTLE, Wash.

DEAR EDITOR.

I WROTE for Thursday's paper.

ABOUT THE head of the bed.

THAT FELL out of the porch.

DOWN THE side of the cliff.

AND STUCK in a tree.

WELL, THE next morning.

WE GOT a rope.

AND LET it down.

FROM THE sleeping porch.

AND THE loop in the rope.

SLIPPED DOWN.

ON THE top of the tree.

AND WE went down.

THE SIDE of the cliff.

WITH THE other end of the rope.

IN OUR hands.

AND THE same squirrels.

THAT CHASED me.

THE PREVIOUS morning.

CAME OUT again.

AND WE got a neighbor.

WITH A FLIVVER.

THAT WAS full of loose nuts.

AND MADE him drive.

UP AND down the beach.

AT THE foot of the cliff.

AND THE squirrels chased him.

AND WE pulled.

ON THE end of the rope.

AND THE tree came down.

TILL WE could almost reach.

THE HEAD of the bed.

AND MY pants.

AND JUST then.

THE ROPE broke.

AND THE tree shot back.

AND THE head of the bed.

AND MY pants.

WERE CATAPULTED.

INTO THE sea.

AND THEY sank.

AND THEY'RE gone.

AND I can't get them.

AND I'M going to leave.

ON THE next train.

AND I know.

THAT I promised.

I'D BE home Monday.

AND YOU'LL be sore.

AND EVERYTHING.

BUT MR. Editor.

YOU'RE A man.

AND YOU know.

WOMAN ADMITS GUILT AS 'SLAVER'

"Madame Olga," the aged Lyan fortune teller, to whose Knox County maids and swains have been going for years to learn their destinies of heart and fortune, pleaded guilty in Lynn court today to having used her fortune-telling business as a cloak to hide an improper traffic in girls.

The woman, through her counsel, begged for clemency on the ground of age. She agreed to leave the State, if she could escape jail. Judge Lummus consented to put her on probation on condition that she get out of Massachusetts before October 1 and stay out at least two years.

EVIDENCE BY GIRLS.

The technical charge against "Madame Olga" was "procuring girls for improper purposes." She also pleaded guilty to getting money under false pretences. This related to her accepting payment for fortune telling. Her method was to have the patron drop a fee in a saucer on the card table.

The defendant, who is sixty-eight, did not take the stand. Deputy Police Chief David W. Bartlett said that police sent three girls to her who secured evidence.

The inside story of how the police trapped "Madame Olga," or Pearl Lincoln, as she her real name has just been learned. In a recent raid in Lynn, the police arrested a Boston, an Everett and a Malden girl. In court they were put on probation, which was better than they had expected.

Then as the story goes, the police, who had received complaints about "Madame Olga," asked the three girls if they would help the police by securing evidence against the fortune teller. The girls consented, went to the fortune teller and reported back to the police.

METHOD OF WORK.

Wednesday afternoon Patrolman Arthur L. Vaughn went in disguise to "Madame Olga's" place on the second floor of a building on Central square. He says that the fortune teller made an appointment for him to meet a girl later and that the girl was one of the three the police were using to trap the fortune teller. "Madame Olga's" arrest followed.

Today the police had the three girls where they could be called upon to testify, but the fortune teller's plea of guilty made their stories unnecessary. The police are carefully keeping secret the names of the girls.

One of the fortune teller's methods of making acquaintances was to distribute her fortune telling cards among girls. When the girls would came to her to have their fortunes told—especially young and pretty ones—the fortune teller would put their minds with visions of ease and luxury.

EXPLOSION VICTIMS ARE IN HOSPITAL

Brockton, Aug. 25.—The four hospital victims of the explosion and fire which wrecked a factory building occupied by the E. L. Gowdy Shoe Company, were reported today in a serious condition. Nine men were hurt, but five did not require hospital treatment. The four most seriously injured are:

J. EDGAR PIKE, forty-one years old, of Danbury, Ct.; a master mechanic, employed in installing machinery for the Eugene L. Gowdy Company; blown through a window, badly burned about the face and body, and taken to the Brockton Hospital.

WALTER E. SAMPSON, forty-seven years old, of North Easton; also blown through a window, burned on face and head, and badly bruised; Brockton Hospital.

JOHN STONKUS, a Pole, living on Battles street; face and arms severely burned; Brockton Hospital.

CLIVE DUNN, eighteen years old, of No. 556 Auburn street, Whitman; left arm very badly burned; treated and detained at the Brockton Hospital.

In yesterday's thunder storm a bolt of lightning struck a 500 gallon tank of denatured alcohol, causing it to explode. It wrecked the rear of the building and set fire to the ruins, with a total damage estimated at $75,000.

A report that John Stonkus of Battles street and Walter E. Sampson of North Easton were missing was denied today. The men hurried home after the explosion. Relatives who went to the factory did not know the two were at their homes and so reported them as still unaccounted for.

NAVAL INQUIRY ON GUAM DISPUTE

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 25.—Conditions in the distant Pacific Island of Guam and a serious dispute between Captain William J. Maxwell, now commandant at the naval station at Newport, and Lieutenant Commander W. P. Cronan, formerly aide to Rear-Admiral Bradley Fiske, but now Governor of Guam, are under investigation by the Navy Department. Secretary Daniels has designed Captain William R. Shoemaker, recently relieved as commander of the battleship Arkansas, to conduct the investigation, which is surrounded with considerable mystery, the department refusing all information concerning it.

Commander Cronan, when relieved of his detail here, was sent to Guam, as aide to Captain Maxwell, then governor of Guam. Serious differences of opinion dealing with concessions to be granted are reported to have broken out between the two. Finally Captain Maxwell was ordered home on sick leave, later being assigned to duty at Newport.

Commander Cronan automatically assumed the post of Governor, which he now holds. It is understood that Captain Shoemaker will investigate allegations that Commander Cronan used "unprofessional" methods to oust his superior and that, if the alleged charges are supported, a court of inquiry will be ordered.

Berlin, Aug. 25.—General von Beseler, Governor-General of the occupied territory in Russia, has granted to the University and Technical High School at Warsaw new charters.

MEN OF GENIUS WANTED, SAYS LIGGETT

Louis K. Liggett, president of the United Drug Company, today told the delegates at the business session of the fourteenth annual Rexall convention in Symphony Hall that the company intended to spend more money in securing high class men to do experimental work.

"We want men who can create new things and not imitate others," he said. "We want men with genius and reputation and they must be obtained. We are not egotistical in saying this, but our policy in the business is not to be imitators of others, but to be creating our own ideas. For everything we make we must have a clean bill. This we have had for our products. We are not building for today's market, but for next year's market and those that are to come."

WELL DEFINED POLICIES.

Vice-President Louis I. Shreiner made a strong plea in his address for well defined policies in business. "We have not a well defined policy in our national affairs. America has not kept pace with other nations," he said.

"We want quality in our products—and must spare no expense in getting the right men. We must keep our employes happy and contented as well as safeguard the quality of our merchandise. Cost of merchandise is our last consideration. Merchandise is our first consideration.

"In this company we have a well defined policy and we have great possibilities ahead."

Dr. E. S. Parker, manager of the pharmaceutical department, showed how druggists were not robbers as told of the claims of his department upon the company and other companies. "Mr. Liggett wants more growth and great progress," he said.

WANT MEN OF ENERGY.

"We are not to be driven, but we want men of energy in every department. We want more brain extract and we want to inject this into every task, to stimulate everything, as say about our company."

"More sales are made by suggestion than by calls," said C. H. Zimmerman of the trailer department. "Clerks should have their minds full of suggestions. Money spent in buying samples never goes amiss."

Among other speakers at the morning session were J. A. Crane of the Liggett Company, Lee W. Miller Miller of Niagara Falls, N. Y.; J. J. Allen of Canada; W. C. Church of the British Isles; A. W. Campbell of the insurance department and Charles McCullum, manager of the cigar department.

The final business meeting was held this afternoon. The Summer Frolic comes off tonight at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

"Blue" Fleet to Fight with "Reds" in Mimic Battle

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 25.—A great naval battle will be staged somewhere off the Atlantic coast today. From information leaking into the Navy Department, officials believe that Rear Admiral Helm's "Blue" fleet defending the Atlantic coast in the navy war game would engage the enemy, the "Red" fleet, under Admiral Mayo, some time before tonight.

This battle will mark the close of the war game and on its result will hinge whether the Atlantic coast is safe from invasion. Rear Admiral Knight, the "umpire," aboard the Pennsylvania, will decide which fleet is victorious.

All night long messages were picked up by the Arlington wireless station here telling of the manoeuvering of the two fleets. One report was flashed into all naval hospitals along the coast to get ready to receive wounded. Another message to a naval station ordered quarters prepared at once for a whole ship's crew which was incapacitated because of an epidemic of scarlet fever.

The commandant of the station was ordered to provide a new crew for the ship at once.

14 INJURED IN SPRINGFIELD CRASH

Springfield, Aug. 25.—Fourteen persons were injured, five seriously, when a heavily loaded trolley car crashed into a standing car at the plant of the Fibreloid Company at Bircham Bend, Indian Orchard, at 6:46 o'clock this morning.

Nine of the injured were taken to Ludlow Hospital, while five less seriously injured were taken to their homes. None of the injured is expected to die.

The two cars contained workmen from this city, bound for their work. The accident was due to a heavy fog, and the motorman of the second car failed to see the one ahead until but a few feet away. This is the fourth serious accident on the Bircham Bend line within six weeks.

The most seriously injured, all of whom were taken to the Ludlow Hospital, are:

Mrs. Catherine Guyette, sprained shoulder and internal injuries; John Fennenick, injured hip and possible internal injuries; Henry Martin, sprained ankle and bruised body; Edward Cesta, back and hip injured; John Rusk, abrasions on arm; Victor La Rose, arm injured; Frank Brisset, ankle sprained; John Forman, back injured; Frank Formoracice, injured hip.

None of the car crews was injured. Conductor Tzizo, the motorman of the second car, jumped in time to save himself. Both cars were badly smashed. Practically all those who were injured were passengers on the rear car.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clauses, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

BROTHER OF KING OF SIAM GOING TO HARVARD

His Royal Highness Prince Mahidol of Songkla, one of the younger brothers of the King of Siam, is expected soon in Gloucester, where he will spend the remainder of the Summer, preparatory to entering Harvard for a special course in sanitation.

Prince Mahidol is now in Chicago with the Siamese Minister to the United States and suite. He recently arrived in Chicago on his way eastward from Siam, via San Francisco.

On account of their straight black hair and dark eyes the Siamese bear a general resemblance to the Japanese. But the Siamese eyes are straight instead of oblique, and their general expression is nearer that of the Caucasian than the Japanese expression is.

However, this did not prevent a jealous customs officer at San Francisco from refusing a landing to Prince Mahidol, on the assumption that he was a Japanese. The pleasant diplomatic relations which exist between Columbia and the Sacred White Elephant came near being strained. The customs officer was promptly informed as to the Prince's royal and Siamese status and the affair was smoothed over.

Prince Mahidol is the fourth of the younger brothers of King Sondateh Phra Paramendr msha Vajiravudh Phra Mongut Klao, the Siamese sovereign, who ascended the throne five years ago on the death of his progressive father, King Chulalongkorn.

The young King is only thirty-five years old and Prince Mahidol is of college age. The King was educated in England for ten years, but came to this country in the administration of President Roosevelt and visited the principal cities. The King, like his father, admires America greatly.

Years ago the late King Chulalongkorn secured Professor Edward H. Strobel from Harvard as his general adviser, practically the highest office in the Siamese State, next to the crown.

On Professor Strobel's death he was succeeded by his assistant, Jens Ivens Westengard, a former Harvard instructor. There is tremendous respect in the Siamese royal establishment at Bangkok for Harvard College, and now the King is sending one of his brothers to the college which furnished general advisers for the crown.

The King's brothers hold land titles, after the European fashion. Mahidol is Prince of Songkla, a town and district halfway down the Malay Peninsula which lies between the South China Sea and the Bay of Bengal.

TWO WHALES OFF NEW JERSEY BEACH

Spring Lake, N. J., Aug. 25.—Two whales appeared off to the north end of the beach just beyond the breakers, and entertained hundreds on the boardwalk for over an hour. They travelled slowly southward and when last seen were off Bayhead, five miles below here.

Captain William A. Osborne, keeper of the Spring Lake coast guard station, shot at them but missed. He said they were sixty feet long. They swam about ten yards apart, coming frequently to the surface.

As a result of a new wage and working agreement, the New England Telephone Company has granted to the Boston Telephone Operators' Union an increase in maximum pay from $12 to $14. HUGHES AIDING WILSON, SAYS M'CORMICK

By VANCE C. M'CORMICK, Chairman Democratic National Committee.

Let Mr. Hughes keep on talking: he is making votes for Wilson and Marshall every day. I say this in no satirical vein.

In his campaign of faultfinding the Republican candidate has said little or nothing that is constructive, because there is little or nothing for him to say, and in this predicament he has uttered so many words that only react to condemn himself and his party that it may seem unkind even for his opponents to keep directing attention to them.

But, for the public's enlightment, let us go further into the sepulchral cry of "sectionalism" raised by Mr. Hughes at Butte, Montana. "Now, look at this!" cried Mr. Hughes, pointing a finger of horror at the list of committee chairmanships of the House of Representatives held by members of the Democratic party from Southern States, who, in the process of seniority, have risen to their positions.

NO APOLOGISTS NEEDED.

"All estimable gentlemen," declared Mr. Hughes. "I have no personal criticism to make of the honor, respectability and agreeable character of these gentlemen. But I say to any administration under which so many of the committees of the House of Representatives are represented in one section in that matter is a sectional administration. It is not an American administration in the broad and proper sense given to that word."

It is not necessary for me to "answer" Mr. Hughes, for this administration needs no apologists. Those who wish to inform themselves directly on facts which Mr. Hughes has attempted to pervert for political purposes will find them in detail in the Congressional Record of August 18, in which Representative Clark of Florida calls attention to the fact that when the Republican party was in power there were no committee chairmanships in the South.

DENIES IT IS SECTIONALISM.

"But, Mr. Speaker," continued Mr. Clark, "this is not sectionalism, and no one knows it any better than does Mr. Hughes. He simply thinks it is a good enough 'Morgan' for him in his dire extremity. I regret exceedingly that he has sought to inject sectionalism into this campaign; we are all Americans and all interested in the welfare of one country, and no man can be a patriot who would seek to disturb the general feeling of brotherly affection now happily prevailing all over the land."

So much for the shallowness of Candidate's Hughes' accusation. Now, for a representative Republican view of Mr. Hughes' attempt to inject a sectionalism issue into this campaign. Nothing has been said bearing more closely upon this variety of Mr. Hughes' boasted Americanism than the words of Congressman Joseph G. Cannon, delivered a fortnight before Mr. Hughes' outburst at Butte. Mr. Hughes cannot well repudiate this view of "Uncle Joe," proud standpatter and undenied reactionary, who is Republican to his marrow bones.

HUGHES SURE TO CARRY MAINE, SAYS WILLCOX

By WILLIAM R. WILLCOX, Chairman of Republican National Committee.

The prospect of an overwhelming Republican victory in Maine this year does not rest upon the mere expectations of the return of the Progressives to their former allegiance, but upon definite political accomplishments of the past year.

The Progressives are not "coming back"—they have never gone. Maine and Massachusetts elected Democratic Governors in 1914, by which time the amalgamation of the two parties had not become an accomplished fact, although the tendency was strongly in that direction.

A year ago the Progressives and Republicans of Massachusetts had completely reunited behind the standard of Samuel W. McCall, whose progressive administration has made the Bay State safely Republican in 1916 and the five years of Democratic rule by his predecessors.

Political thought in Maine and Massachusetts runs in the same channel, and has done so since the time when the Pine Tree State was a part of the Old Bay Commonwealth. Their people have the same traditions, the same habits of mind, and are actuated by identical influences, social and economic.

DEMOCRATS LOST STRONGHOLDS.

Although Maine did not elect a State ticket a year ago, municipal elections were held in a large number of Maine cities, which resulted in a Republican landslide of State-wide proportions. The Democracy lost strongholds that it had held for years.

That this movement back to the Republican party was not due to local issues, but reflected the general political drift of the country, was demonstrated by the fact that the same Republican sweep characterized last year's municipal elections throughout New England. Maine was not alone in repudiating Democratic rule wherever the opportunity was presented.

The Republican landslide in the municipal elections in Massachusetts was but part of the same Republican swing apparent in Connecticut and in New Hampshire, where sweeping Republican victories were the rule. All important New England cities, many of which were under Democratic control only a year or so ago, now have Republican administrations. And it is significant that everywhere these results were attained by frank and friendly recognition of the Progressive element and on national issues to a very considerable extent.

CAPITAL SEEKS CHANCE.

Capital is seeking further investment in manufacturing in Maine, and with the assurance of an honest and adequate tariff a tremendous industrial boom would now be under way.

But for the threatening shadow of Secretary McAdoo's socialistic scheme for government competition in the carrying trade, Maine shipbuilding by now would have been placed upon a firm and permanent basis, and has yet be saved and made great again, as in the days of the old sailing ships.

HUGHES ADDS TO ITINERARY ON STUMP

By International News Service.

En route with Hughes, Aug. 25.—Charles Evans Hughes and his retinue left Utah today for Wyoming. The candidate is scheduled to arrive at Cheyenne at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and will make two addresses there before heading eastward again.

Coincident with Mr. Hughes' arrival, his campaign managers have announced a further program of stumping.

He will make a short address in Cincinnati on September 6 and then go back East for a long siege of speechmaking, broken only by several days' rest at Bridgehampton, L. I. Due to a misunderstanding of the scheduling arrangements at Salt Lake City last night, the Hughes reception was not an enthusiastic one.

The local committee had been informed that the candidate did not desire a great crowd to assemble at the station, and the party arrived in almost total silence.

Some of the lack of campaign fire was made up for, however, by the enthusiasm with which the 12,000 persons greeted his remarks in the Mormon Temple later in the evening. Mr. Hughes' voice is holding out remarkably well, his advisers say.

Sox Seem Sure Winners Foster May Face Tigers

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

Only a few weeks ago the fans were saying that they hoped the Red Sox could repeat, but they figured this, that or the other thing to be in the way. As a matter of fact from the time the Champs wrested the lead from the White Sox in their own ball yard they have been very much in the race.

Their cleanup of the Cleveland clubs and their victory over the Tigers in the opening game when Jennings sent three of his best pitchers in to stop them, has sent the stock of the Lannin club soaring. Two games are yet to be played with the Tigers and then the Browns appear for a four-game series, they being the most dangerous team in the league aside from the Yankees, who appear to have taken a new lease of life.

A SEVEN-GAME LEAD?

Still the Red Sox look very good to me and their lead at this moment with the speculation or what they are likely to do against Detroit and the Browns, makes it look as if they would leave home with at last a seven-game lead. This should be enough for them, and they should never be headed or even closely approached.

I am not belittling the importance of either New York, Washington or Philadelphia for that matter, but it does look pretty good for the Carrigan crew to be playing in the East, while the Western clubs are eating each other up, so to speak, because in the West vs. West contest while the East is playing the East there must be just so many losses.

The Champions are playing the kind of ball that the flag in centre field indicates. They have led the flight for some weeks now, and appear to be able to carry it to the other team more forcefully than before. Their great defensive strength is improving all the time and with anything like pitching they should breeze in.

MITCHELL MAY HURL.

No one knows why Mitchell wasn't sent in to pitch yesterday, except Manager Jennings, who chose a member of the Cavaleskie family. Maybe he will pick Mitchell today. It seems highly probable for he worked but one inning. Manager Carrigan may send Foster to the mound, but there is some talk of "No-hit-no-run George" having trouble with his arm. In the event that this is so Shore is a likely nominee.

The Detroit Club is a tough one to beat at any time and just now the boys look pretty good. Vitt is playing a fine game at third. Cobb can tell to a moral certainty where that ball is to hit once it starts and he grabs many a hit in a game through his ability plus his speed. Crawford may be an old hand at the game, but there are few right fielders aside from Ruth who have anything on him now. Young is a classy little second sacker and the pitching staff of the Tigers appears to be about the only reason why they are not up there. Jennings is a grand leader, who has his team with him at all stages of the game, and this one defeat means only that the Red Sox will have to travel all the faster to get the next two.

JIM SCOTT IS SENT HOME BY ROWLAND

Washington, Aug. 25.—Jim Scott, veteran, right-handed pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, has been sent home by Manager Rowland for failure to observe training rules. His suspension is indefinite.

FOHLS DIDN'T MISS THIS

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—Philadelphia fans are giving the laugh to Tris Speaker today. The Indians' best belt laid off in the second game yesterday and the team was its first game since coming East.

Stallings Mum on Zim Club on Pennant Road

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Carefree and easy like, George Tweety Stallings, leader of the bustling Braves, was up quite early this brilliant day. When queried regarding the status of Heinieim, there appeared a knowing twinkle in his eye, but nothing more. In truth Stallings admitted he hadn't thought about the mighty walloper thus far today.

"That admission, however, must be taken with seasoning, for once George gets his mind on any one subject nothing will take it off. He has spent the past several days seriously pondering over the Zimmerman situation. He has gone to the greatest ends to land Heinie, and its better than even money that the big lad from the Bronx becomes a Brave shortly.

PENNANT HANDY.

The win yesterday, which dragged his athletes up to within easy striking distance of the Robins, was a tonic to Stallings. The ball club had the punch which means games won and a pennant. He doesn't fear the remaining games in the series. He staked his judgment on Tom Hughes and the tall boy came through in admirable fashion. Further than that, his stickmen nicely polished one of Tinker's best bets.

Chances strongly favor Richard Rudolph, who has a record of nine straight wins to his credit, going after the second game of the series. Little Dick has rested well and is fit for the fray. If Rudolph shouldn't start it would seem as though Frank Allen would get the job. Gene Packard seems like the probable Cub chucker.

Reverting to yesterday's game, it was a good exhibition the Braves captured because they hit opportunely. While they were trimming the Cubs, the humble Reds were downing Brooklyn, which causes pennant hopes to swell strongly again in the breasts of all the Bostonese. At this stage of the race a gain of one whole contest in a single day is nothing at which to sneeze.

KONETCHY DOES IT ALL.

Ed Konetchy carved himself a little niche in the Hall of Fame in that he was responsible for all five of the Braves' runs. He drove in three with a double and a single and made the other two himself.

In addition, the Big Train gathered five putouts and had two assists. This is a fair day's doing for any athlete.

Claude Hendrix hurled for the clan of Tinker and the Braves got after the ex-Pirate right off the reel. After Maranville and Snodgrass failed, Wilhoit singled to right and stole second. Next, Magee walked. Konetchy followed with a double to deep left, and the two runners registered.

HUGHES STARTS BADLY.

The Cubs also made a noisy start, but the "breaks" weren't just right and all they gathered was one run. Hofman began by promenading. After Flack lifted to Snodgrass, Mann and Saier singled together. The drives scored Hofman and moved Mann up to third.

Zeider, subbing for Heinie Zim, spilled to Smith and Mann was retired in a run-up. Hughes pegged high to Konetchy in an attempt to pick Zeider off first. So Saier cut loose for home, but Big Ed recovered in time to whip the sphere to Blackburn for the out.

The Braves went an additional length out to front in the fourth. After Magee fouled to Saier, Konetchy singled to centre and moved up on a wild pitch. Smith singled, and, when Egan followed with a tall spiral to Flack, Big Ed tallied.

BIG TRAIN REPEATS.

The Coming Champions tacked on two more runs, just for good measure, in the sixth. Wilhoit walked and Connolly was put in to run for him. Magee laid down the desired sacrifice and Konetchy followed with a line smack to centre, on which Connolly paid off. The Big Train took second on the throw-in, and, after Smith died to Hofman, breezed over the pan when Egan smiled a two-bagger to left.

As added feature of the matinee was the presence of Ban Johnson, president of the American League. This was the first occasion he has deigned to lend his company to a gathering of ex-Federals.

HON. BAN ON DECK

Johnson not only saw the battle, but visited the club's offices after the game, grasped the hands of all the former Feds, who are now identified with the Cubs, expressed the hope they live long and prosper and otherwise acted in a friendly manner.

When Big Ban caves it is a sure sign the baseball war is over, done and finished.

F. JONES PROTESTS LOSS TO SENATORS

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Word has been received from New York that Manager Fielder Jones of the Browns has protested the loss of the second game in Washington, Wednesday. Jones bases his protest on the ground that the game was started so late an hour to play nine innings and claims he protested to Umpires Connolly and Chill in advance.

PHILLIES LOSE PROTEST

New York, Aug. 25.—President Tener has disallowed the claim of Philadelphia against Cincinnati protesting the winning of the game between these two clubs at Philadelphia August 13. The game will stand in Cincinnati's favor as played, 3-2.

McGraw Framing Double Deal for Players

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 25.—Manager McGraw of the Giants is trying to engineer a double deal with Brooklyn and Chicago, according to reports in circulation here today.

The deal with Brooklyn will include the trading of first baseman Merkle and possibly second baseman Doyle for pitcher Appleton and infielder Getz. The deal with Chicago will be Doyle and Benny Kauf, or shortstop Fletcher and Kauf for Heinie Zimmerman.

McGraw is expected to reach here today to talk the prospective trade over with President Ebbets of the Dodgers.

Ebbets wants a seasoned first baseman to replace Jake Daubert, who is on the hospital list.

BETTING FAVORS BRITT

New Bedford Battler Pick of Talent In Tonight's Fistic Bout With Delmont at C. A. C.

COMMERCIAL A. C. CARD.

Young Britt of New Bedford vs. Al Delmont of the North End, twelve rounds.

Mel Coogan of Brooklyn vs. "Sailor" Henry, eight rounds.

Tommy Glover vs. Young Terry, six rounds.

Dave Morrison vs. "Kid" French, six rounds.

Referee—Jack Sheehan.

Club's location—No. 7 Green street, West End.

By RINGSIDE.

Al Delmont, the veteran North End lovesman, New England's former featherweight premier and a mighty efficient miller in his day, will endeavor to stop the winning streak of Young Britt of New Bedford, this section's supposedly best 129-pounder, in the ring at the Commercial A. C. tonight.

A week ago ol' Matty Baldwin, former N. E. lightweight champion, failed dismally when he attempted to put the rollers under Harry Carlson of Brockton, the rising young lightweight. But that doesn't worry Delmont. Nor is Al worried because he was somewhat lucky to gain a draw recently with Howard McKie, while Young Britt gave the Cambridge chap nine pounds and a bad beating in the bargain.

Delmont claims he'll be cherry ripe for the New Bedford battler and will succeed in showing that ambitious broiler he is only a flash-in-the-pan. Still, the bulk of the talent, less the out-and-out Delmont devotees, figure Young Britt the best sort of a best bet and the youngster is expected to rule quite a hot favorite at ringside.

COOGAN ON WITH TAR.

The clubs semi-final number should please. It brings together Mel Coogan, the lanky Brooklyn boy, who is credited with having given Lightweight Champion Johnny Kilbane a good battle, and who showed a lot of "pep" when on with Billy Myers at the Arena a few weeks ago, and "Kid" Henry, a tar.

Coogan is a shiffy workman and a pretty good hitter with it. Henry is reported to be a slap-bang battler. What comes to pass remains to be seen. However the fur is bound to fly providing Henry is really as good as pictured. Coogan is due for something any slouch.

The boys programmed to appear in the two six-rounders are Tony Glover and Young Terry and Dave Morrison and "Kid" French, Jack Sheehan, the famous automobile racer, will referee all four bouts, which means that none of the scraps scarcely be missed.

MORAN GOES SOUTH.

Vic Moran, the crack young New Orleans lightweight, who delivered in great style in his bout with Frankie Mack, the Benchmont 147-pounder, at the Arena Tuesday night, left for his home town yesterday. He's making the trip by boat and plans remaining with his folks until after Labor Day, when he will return to Boston and endeavor to get another Arena booking.

Benny Leonard, the New York sensation, is the Moran particularly desires to face. He met Billy Gibson's star in June and was doing his best work in the windup. Vic figures he has an even chance with Leonard over the twelve-round Boston route.

Joe McCarthy, Moran's manager, received offers today for two battles. Buffalo wants Vic for Johnny Lustig and Rochester is anxious to get him for Willie Beecher a week later. Both bids were spurned. That's because Moran's two hands are in bad shape.

The youngster needs a rest; is taking it and figures the ride to New Orleans, there and back by water, will do him a lot of good.

CLINE IS A VICTOR OVER LEO JOHNSON

New York, Aug. 25.—"Irish Patsy" Cline, the local lightweight, outpointed Leo Johnson in ten fast rounds at the Empire A. C. It was a slugfest all the way. Cline did his best work in a belly, which extended through the last three rounds, using both hands to advantage. Johnson's weight is under the lightweight limit. In the other star bout Marty Cross easily outpointed Young Jack O'Brien of Philadelphia.

PAUL SMITH IS A REDLEG

Cincinnati, Aug. 25.—Outfielder Paul Smith of the Montreal (International League) club has been purchased by the Reds' management.

Golf, according to a prominent ball player, is the best training for baseball.

Golf, according to a prominent pugilist, is the best training for a boxing match.

Golf, according to a prominent driver, is the best training for auto racing.

In fact, we have gleaned from our talks with various gents who are incurably inflicted with love of the game that golf is the one and only form of training for any brand of sport from the rock-bound coast of Biddlefordshire to the sweet shores of Bullfighting. Warming up to his subject, the golfer goes on to tell you that it stimulates the blood, adds ten years to your life, cures dandruff, infantile paralysis, corns, bunions, warts, spavin, springhalt, glanders, pip, housemaid's knee, and is good for man or beast.

But what we want to know is this: What is the best training for golf?

One way to make an auto race more interesting is to give Dario Resta first money and let the rest of them fight it out for second place.

Harvard Should Worry Leo and Reggie on Job

By TOM THORP.

The fact that Percy Haughton may find it impossible to take up the football reins at Harvard at the beginning of the gridiron season is causing less worriment among Crimson supporters than some athletic authorities would have imagined. Although Cambridge would welcome Haughton with open arms, his failure to put in an appearance until after the preliminary season had been finished, would not cause the Harvard authorities to lose hope for football success.

The idea that any one man is indispensable to an athletic team is a thing of the past. Football, like all other branches of sports, has developed beyond that stage. There are hundreds of men fully able to step in and take charge where any of the "big fellows" have left off. In the case at Cambridge, at least five men could be named who are sufficiently well qualified to assume the football burden that Percy Haughton has been labouring under during the past few years. In fact, a great part of the load during the present Haughton reign has rested on other shoulders.

True it is that Haughton was the individual who was designated as coach to rescue the bright Crimson from the dust of defeat, and well has he completed his task. It is also true that it was through his knowledge of individuals that the Cambridge college was enabled to collect so formidable a squad of football generals as assistant coaches. But during the past few years real instruction to the players has been taken up by two of the greatest coaches and strategists that the gridiron game has ever developed. Reggie Brown and Leo Leary have done much toward the ultimate success of football at Cambridge.

STARRED AS PLAYERS.

Both are ex-stars who have proved their worth in too many battles to mention. As players they were the individual leaders in their respective positions. Brown was known as the craftiest footballer of his day, while Leary was picked by the majority of experts as the ideal end man of the present generation of gridiron performers. Both have made good between and any question as to their ability.

In the system in vogue at Cambridge, Brown and Leary are as necessary to the football machine as Haughton himself. They take up the burden of the early instruction and drill the men in the fundamentals of the game. The quality of their coaching has been apparent on many occasions.

Time and again has victory been snatched from defeat by some Harvard player exercising the knowledge of the fundamentals that have been so ably portrayed by Brown and Leary. All experts agree that Harvard's strength has been due in no small measure to all-around good knowledge of the game.

The key to football at Harvard today is a most mathematical business proposition. Each moment of the time that a candidate spends on the gridiron is taken care of in the most minute way. No time is wasted by any one. The men report at a specified time, are allowed sufficient time to get into togs, and after that they are required to put in every minute of the afternoon at some sort of work.

Haughton stands over the individual players as a contracting foreman presides over his gang, and when they are wanted to change from one department of the game to another the head mentor sounds a whistle, and all things come to a rest.

GREAT DEFENSIVE COACHES.

Brown and Leary are the individuals who do the actual coaching. They are the ones who go out and show the men in actual performance just how football is correctly played. These two assistants are also the men who devise the plan of attack and defence that the Crimson warriors employ in all of their struggles.

Reggie Brown is considered the greatest defensive coach for the present game. It is his knowledge of defensive play that has enabled Harvard to earn the reputation of having the most complete defence of any football aggregation. Brown has taught the Harvard eleven different styles of defence.

Every man who has ever represented Harvard on the gridiron has nothing but words of praise for both of these coaches. The sporting world knows how well the quality of game that they are capable of teaching, while all Cambridge is loud in proclaiming the fact that should the Braves win the National League pennant and Hanlon should find himself too busily engaged in dividing the spoils of the world's series that Harvard football is sure to go on in the same even plane as during the past few years. Cambridge is willing to bank on Brown and Leary in developing a real championship aggregation.

Up to Wiley to Hurry if He's to Keep Title

TONIGHT'S REVERE CARD.

American motor-paced championship (50 miles). Starters: George Wiley, Syracuse, N. Y.; Clarence Carman, Jamaica, L. I.; Fred Herbert, Fall River; Bobby Walthour, Atlanta, Ga.

Amateur and professional events.

A new American motor-paced champion may be crowned tonight, when four of the country's best machine followers clash in a fifty-mile race at the Revere cycle track. The field comprises George Wiley, present title-holder; Clarence Carman, Bobby Walthour and Fred Herbert.

Carman has been installed a hot favorite, though many believe it will be Herbert, one of the sensations of the current season, who will wrest the title from Wiley. The chief obstacle that confronts Herbert is the distance. He has never travelled more than thirty miles behind pace.

Some doubt the Fall River boy's staying qualities, though he has not failed in his four starts at the beach oval this season. Of these he won three, an admirable record for such an inexperienced youngster.

A one-hour motor-paced race, with Victor Linart, Georges Seres, Leon Didier and Vincent Madonna facing the starter, will head tomorrow night's bill.

ROBBY AFTER KELLY.

Cincinnati, Aug. 25—Hard pressed for a first baseman, with Jack Daubert on the disabled list, Manager Robinson of the Dodgers expects to land Fred Kelly from the Giants and play him on the bag until the regular's captain is in shape again. A pitcher is to be traded for the Californian.

SOX NOTES

FIVE is a new league good for any club, and when the champions can get that kind of a start it looks pretty good for them to repeat.

* * *

At the Colonial Theatre tonight the members of the Detroit and Red Sox teams, accompanied by their constituents, will be the guests of Manlon Carey and Joseph Riley, at the performance of "The Amber Empress."

* * *

THERE is one thing certain, Ruth may be in poor shape physically, but there was no indication of it in his work yesterday.

* * *

TWO games more from the Tygers would make the Red Sox champs. Some the fitness to quote a telegram in letter from the standpoint of sensational climbing. Regardless of the result of the series, but you will have to admit he made a grand start for.

* * *

* * *

TY COBB was jumping out back of second when Lewis lifted his fly there in the fourth. Under ordinary fielding Jack would have had it.

* * *

WALKER'S double in the seventh bounced off the fence in the infield corner side of the pavilion.

* * *

HOOPER had his eye on the ball, getting three hits in four times at bat.

* * *

BARRY got his usual terrible hit.

* * *

SCOTT continues to play his heads up game. He made a swell play on Crawford in the second.

* * *

LARRY GARDNER'S play on Bush in the eighth had the fans.

* * *

COVELESKIE pitches the kind of ball that sends it up in the air. The outfielders didn't have much work getting their numerous put outs.

* * *

TWO wild pitches in the same inning, and nearly the same man, is something seldom seen in a major league ball game. Boland was the guilty party and Walker scored from second on them.

* * *

TUBE SPENCER, who at one time about eight years ago, was catcher for the Red Sox, worked in that capacity for the Tygers and found more on the ground who remembered him.

Paul Tewksbury and Goodale in P. C. Finish

A. H. Goodale of Wollaston and Paul Tewksbury of Woodland are the finalists in the Press Club golf championship, after one on the links of the Wollaston Golf Club and clash tomorrow for the title.

Yesterday Tewksbury defeated F. J. Wright, Jr., the Massachusetts junior champion, in the only match played in the championship fight, while Goodwin, a former Press Club title holder, won by default owing to the non appearance of Dr. J. S. Phelps.

Wright lost his ball on the sixteenth hole in his semi-final contest against Tewksbury, owing to the fact that his caddy did not see where his hooked tee shot went. Tewksbury took the seventeenth hole and the match.

In the other division Tommy McCarthy, the former famous professional ball player, defeated R. Babson, 3 up in 36 holes, and G. A. Whittemore won from J. A. Farres, 2 and 1; S. S. Smith and J. E. O'Connell were victors, while D. G. Goodspeed and W. R. Usher are the finalists for the President's Cup.

WELSH GUARDING HANDS WITH CARE

Colorado Springs, Col., Aug. 25—With the battle yet ten days away, Charley White and Freddie Welsh are in the full swing of strenuous training for their championship mill here on Labor Day.

Welsh is taking unusual precautions to guard his hands. Every day before Freddie dons the gloves he wraps them with gauze cars. So fearful is he of his maulers that he has wired Lloyds for their rates of insuring each of his fingers for $2,000, or $20,000 in all.

"BEATRICE FAIRFAX"

Novelized From the Great Film Play

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

By Beatrice Fairfax
(Novelized from the Scenario of Basil Dickey, and Produced by Wharton, Inc., Studios for the International Film Service.)

(Copyright, 1916, International News Service.)

BUDDHA was still in the possession of Dorothy McRay—and the Indians did not propose that their god should be kept longer from the altars of his country. Unless Jimmy and I could get to Dorothy at once and bear her a warning, her life itself might be forfeited.

Jimmy voiced my thoughts: "We've got to make a quick getaway, Miss Fairfax. That girl hasn't a soul to protect her. Her father is dead—and the chap she wanted to marry can't do much to protect her, for the police have him. We must get out of here before they hatch up any more mischief."

"Yes. We have all the evidence we need to save Donald Jordan, and the point is to save the witnesses for the defence," said I.

I was glad for a chance to move after the tension of our crouching vigil. Jimmy and I turned. We thought we had come to the end of the story and now like beneficent authors we would be permitted to write: "And so they were married and lived happy ever after."

But we were reckoning without our host, which is a way human fairy godmothers and godfathers have.

As we turned we beheld a menacing figure at the head of the stairs. He stood there for a moment and then vanished. It seemed almost as if he dissolved into space.

"Did you see anything, Mr. Barton?" I asked.

"I thought so—but I guess these East Indian chaps have got us bewitched, Miss Beatrice. We're making up a little magic for ourselves. If there'd been anybody there he'd be there—but he isn't, so he wasn't," finished Jimmy, categorically.

So we stood at the door another minute—a fatal minute.

The white-robed figure we had fancied we saw at the top of the stairway had been no figment of our overstimulated imaginations. It had been another of the Buddhist priests—another of those sworn to vengeance on the unbelievers. That we were listening to the councils of his countrymen was enough to mark us guilty in his eyes.

A Signal Given

As we found later, he went down the stairway again on noiseless feltshod feet. And then on so modern an instrument as a steam pipe he rapped out a signal from the lower floor to the council in the upper room.

Jimmy and I delayed no more than ten seconds after we saw our "ghostly" visitant. But those ten seconds were dangerous—and a moment later we felt that they had been fatal to the happiness of Donald Jordan and Dorothy McRay.

For suddenly the door at which we were kneeling burst open. Jimmy tumbled forward into the room, for his hand had been upon the doorknob and the force with which the door was opened jerked him into it.

Jimmy, I knew, could take care of himself, but what of the lonely girl out on Pelham road—the girl who had lost protection and love and faith that very night? My heart bled for her, and I knew that I must go to her at once. She needed me. Jimmy could manage without me.

I turned and ran in a crouching position which hid me from the group in the room. The stairway was only ten paces behind me—but it seemed long minutes until I reached it. Then I straightened up and ran quickly down. The front door was open. Outside lay freedom. Behind me was the East with its mystery and menace—in front was the West—and safety for Dorothy McRay.

Beatrice Is Caught

I reached the foot of the stairs and the checkered pattern of the moonlight on the street outside seemed flickering a sign of welcome to me.

And just as I stepped to the threshold and safety strong arms muffled me. The man who had found us at the keyhole had betrayed us to the enemy and was preventing me from flight. He dragged me roughly into the room. The Indians were sitting in a circle as if for some council ceremonial.

Jimmy stood at one side of the room. One gas jet flickered in the darkness. The room was quite bare and seemed strangely cut off from the world. It had one window and the door by which I had entered. It seemed remote from all modern civilization—a part of the East.

The swarthy Buddhists sat in a circle and talked a strange jargon —a dialect which seemed formless and wordless to me. I knew Jimmy was master of many languages.

"Do you understand?" I muttered.

Beatrice Fairfax (Grace Darling) in trying to escape from the net is caught by the followers of Buddha.

Jimmy shook his head. "No. I got my college degree on insufficient evidence," said he.

"Silence," commanded one of the Indians angrily.

The Indian Speaks

We stood in the sinister circle of alien souls quite heipless. I thought of the girl I had tried to befriend—the girl whose love story must have so sad an ending if I did not live to tell her the truth. I knew it would not be possible for her to conquer her suspicions—since it was so clearly proven to any who did not know the strange truth that Donald Jordan had brutally murdered the man who had refused him his great desire—the hand of his daughter.

But suddenly the terrible suggestion we had forgotten for a moment in the necessary fears for our own safety which had overcome us, lifted again its ugly voice.

Mahmud held up his hand for silence and turned to me with a courtly deference that I knew was the elaborate sarcasm of the East which, when it appears most servile, is often most triumphantly masterful. "You shall hear our decision, madam, since our affairs interest you so much."

"Don't tell us anything you don't want us to know"— interrupted Jimmy eagerly.

Mahmud bowed again, spreading out his palms in sneering imitation of a salaam. "You shall know—but your knowledge shall not harm us," said he.

A Mortal Menace

Jimmy's eyes found mine—I knew they were trying to convey to me a message of warmth and comfort. But of what avail were warmth and cheer? Dorothy McRay needed us and we were not free to go to her. I did not guess that the Indians were menacing more than bur freedom—our very lives.

"Listen, American man, and listen, too, white memsahib, since your men admit women to their council fires," said Mahmud. "Shree Ali Jalhol, Rajo of Calcutta, gave his life for a great cause—it shall not be in vain. Do you understand?"

"No," said Jimmy. "Lay your cards on the table. Talk English. No diplomatic palaver—tell us just what you intend."

"It shall be as you wish," said Mahmud. "All died for Buddha. Twenty-five years of his life he gave to planning how he should save Buddha from the infidels—an Englishman has died and his life paid for the sacrilege of his theft. That is not enough.

"All died, too. He must be avenged—and Buddha must be returned to the stone altar which waits for its god. The dead Englishman reached out from beyond the grave to kill Ali. All shall reach out from beyond the grave in his turn.

"We go to take the Buddha—and the life of Sahib McRay's daughter. The little white memsahib shall die. Now is it clear? Now do you see the cards on the table?"

The Horrible Threat

Jimmy leaped toward the sneering East Indian. "Before heaven, you can't do a thing like that—this isn't Calcutta; it isn't your underground, caste-ridden India. It's America. There's such a thing as law and order, McRay's dead and Ali's dead.

"All right—that evens things up. We'll go out there with you and get the Buddha. The girl has no right to it. She'll marry a man that they need us right away as witnesses to prove that an innocent man didn't kill her father. I've got a taxi outside; come along."

The East Indian smiled at Jimmy's jaunty assurefulness.

"You and your memsahib will never ride in a taxi again!"

When the Animals Speak

The Lion, Pacing His Cage, Reveals His Sentiments Concerning Man.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

A magnificent African lion stood by the bars of his cage on a hot July day, looking out upon a scene which, if its attractiveness was well calculated to recall the country of his birth. If you doubt that animals have a sentiment corresponding to our amor patriæ, love of the native land, that doubt would have faded as you watched this lion's eye and noted his bearing.

In front of the cage, which was placed beneath the shade of a row of trees, extended a broad level space of ground, covered with yellow sand and pebbles, gleaming in the sunshine, and beyond that rose other leafy trees intermingled with grassy glades and clumps of park shrubbery. The shadows projected across the wide, lawny expanse, and falling upon the green intervales among the trees were precisely such a sight to delight an African landscape, for from civilization, where the roar of a lion at night beside some still pool disturbing the tropical stars, would have been a note accordant with the natural surroundings.

The lion stood, erect, motionless, attentive, with a piercing but far-ranging look in his eyes. Before him, there, not 50 yards off on the ocher-colored gravel, passed many two-legged curiously reckless, staring, gazing, babbling, wondering. A mother lifted up her little girl that she might have a better view of the dreadful yellow beast. A young woman shook her parasol before the lion's eyes with delicious thrill of imaginary defiance, while her empty-faced escort struck a bold pose and, with a shout, with voice and gesture, to draw the attention of the whole assembly, king to his insignificant person, swelling with insolent assumption of superority. The lion looked straight over their heads and did not deign to see them. Not the slightest alteration occurred in his attitude or his ease.

Suddenly a flair, perhaps of human flesh, reached his nostrils. There was a little quiver of their delicate muscles, a just perceptible stiffening of his mighty fore limbs, a slight rising of the mane, and a movement of the tail. But the direction of his eyes did not change. His wild soul was wandering in Africa, behold! under the stimulus of awakened memories, the scenes of his early days.

Without warning, he lowered his head, and a deep, ground-shaking, thunder-like growl issued from his vast throat. He looked at none of the suddenly cowering creatures before him; but they started back as if he had sprung at them. Women ran away screaming, the girl with the parasol shrieked, her bold escort turned pale and nervously clinched her stick, then they all turned away from the cage. Perhaps there was a faint smile on the lion's broad face, but if so it was only a smile of contempt.

THE LIONESS RISES

As he gave forth his voice, his mate, a beautiful, tawny formed lioness, who had been apparently sleeping in a corner, rose and softly advanced to the side of the cage-rubbed against him, as if in a caress, but he paid no attention. The far-off look was still in his eyes and his head was once more erect.

She touched him again, and this time he instantly responded to her advance, and their eyes met. Then turned their back to the crowd, which had now assembled in front of the cage, all silent with excitement, as the word flew from mouth to mouth. "The lion is roaring! Come quick! Look at him!"

In the meantime the lion and the lioness lay down side by side and without a glance at the throng before the cage they fell into communion, in the feline tongue, which no man is yet wise enough to understand through his ears. The lion spoke first.

"I have been dreaming," he said, "of the old life before we fell into the trap. The strong sunlight and the long shadows, and I got to me, and I seemed to catch the scent of a kraal."

The lioness sighed. "That life was pleasanter than this," she murmured. "Why do we remain captive here? Your father was still mighty to strike."

"The petty strength of those contemptible creatures out yonder should never restrain us," returned the lion. "Their weapons are still be helpless before me. But they have a secret power which our Creator has not given to us. I have learned where its seat lies, for I have listened when they did not dream that I attended to them. One of their kind, a little squalling mass over his eyes stood long in front of my cage one day and revealed the whole truth. It is the power of their heads. It is the power of the brain that makes them our masters."

"What is the brain?" asked the lioness.

"It is something mightier than the mightiest muscles," replied the lion. "what weapons have we but those with which we were born? These weak creatures, tottering on their two ridiculous legs, are furnished, through their brains, with little Broadbooting weapons that kill us, and kill even the great elephant, from afar off.

"Their brains make little gods of them, and they strike as the lightning strikes from the sky. Look at these black bars that keep us in. They are not so large as the reeds of a jungle, but with all my strength I cannot bend them. It is with their brains that they make these things."

The lioness sighed again, and rubbed her neck against her lord, as if to comfort him, but he suddenly rose to his feet with a laugh.

"I have not told you all," he said. "There is something more that will cheer you. The oval-eyes said that they had not always had his brain power. There was a force called evolution which had produced it. Once they were no better than other animals. Once they lived as we live and were our easy prey. Why should not that happen to us? Why should not this magic of evolution some day give us brains?

"They think that the Creator made them alone to rule the earth, but why should He not favor us in our turn? With the exception of the strange power of the brain we are nobler creatures than they. That is the thought that strengthens me in my contempt of them. God is our God, too, and our turn will come."

THE GREAT VOICE

While he was speaking the sky darkened, a rattle of heavy raindrops sounded on the gravel, a great wind bent the trees, and the crowd outside the cage began to scatter. Then, in an instant, there was a blinding flash, followed by a burst of thunder that shook the earth. Cries of terror and dismay arose, and the people fled in all directions.

With a roar that matched the thunder the lion sprang to the front of the cage. With mane erect, eyes fiercely blazing and lashing tail, he faced the lightning which a second time rent the sky, and his mingled his voice with the awful tones from the clouds.

"See!" he exclaimed. "The cowards run, for it is the great lion of the sky that speaks! His voice is music to our ears, for thus he makes his promise to his children of the jungle. We, too, shall have brain-power—and then, what can stand against us? Then, who will be behind the bars?"

Capacity

A visitor to a Sunday school was asked to address a few remarks to the children. He took the familiar theme of the children who mocked Elisha and were punished when two she-bears came out of the wood and ate forty-and-two of them.

"And now children," said he, "what does this story show?"

"Please, sir," came from a little girl in the front row, "it shows how many children two she-bears can hold!"

The Love That Lasts

It Is Based on Friendly Understanding and Mutual Respect

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Why do so many marriages go on the rocks?" said my friend the doctor. And then he answered his own question very wisely. "Because they are not based on anything more lasting than—love; and love is generally a beautiful dream."

Everybody knows that a sunset is beautiful—but nobody expects it to last forever. We all gasp at the exquisite beauty of a rainbow—but we know it will fade. So as I listened to the doctor I thought of the transitory nature of most beauty and adjusted myself to his viewpoint.

"Love is for most people a cobweb illusion. It is a desperate attraction formed of a desire for kisses and caresses and thrills. But no substantial dinner ever was made of dessert alone. And no real love consists of an emotional froth that springs up to enrich all around and all the time, and when they do every body exclaims: "But that started out as a love match!"

"Well, of course it did," went on the doctor, smiling solemnly. "But it didn't start as anything else. A marriage that lasts has to be based on congeniality. And that's the only kind of marriage that ever will last."

I remember a line I had read somewhere which went like this: "I sometimes think true friendship consists more in liking the same things than in liking each other."

Well, true love has to consist in liking each other, too.

It must build on a basis of enjoying many things in common and accepting and tolerating the points of difference. A husband and wife may have the jolliest time in the world playing golf together all Saturday and yet differ entirely in their tastes in music.

If she likes grand opera and he prefers burlesque shows, and they are sane enough to smile at each other and permit each other to gratify their widely divergent tastes, they can get a tremendous lot of fun out of their mutual toleration and appreciation of their points of difference.

Good chums and comrades have a wonderful time in sharing certain amusements and in listening to an account of those they cannot share or in just smiling serenely and accepting the fact that wise providence has varied the human species infinitely.

No one has a right to demand that everybody else conform to his own stuinarys. Emotion might be extravagant enough to do that. Base love based on a friendly understanding and a quiet mutuality of respect won't do that.

Yielding to a physical attraction or an emotional stimulation and imagining that either one constitutes real love is just about the same as it would be to imagine that you can spend all your life driving forty miles an hour in an automobile because you like the exhilaration of occasional speeding.

Physical attraction and emotional stimulation fit in beautifully in a love affair where there is liking and admiration, too. But they are fairly certain to wear out after a while, and the thing that lasts is the basis COMRADESHIP which made it a safe and sane thing for two people to unite their lives.

Fat Women, Read This

Useful advice to women inclined to be stout, and many other interesting household facts in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

In Our Wonderful World

According to a scientific theory a woman can talk longer than a man, and may do so because she uses less force in a larger percentage than a man does. A well-known professor has made an accutual and very delicate measurements that the baritone singer uses far more energy than either tenor or soprano. This professor claims that the rangs of voice differs greatly, in the percentage of force to the same extent, but as a general result it was proved that a tenor uses only from one-sixth to one-eighteenth of the lung power of the baritone or bass. The difference in the force used by the contralto and soprano is very marked, and the contralto who sings in very deep tones uses at least ten times the force of the soprano. The explanation is so simple that it is surprising it was not thought of before. It has long been known that the tenor or soprano brings the vocal cords together and keeps the edges vibrating only by the emission of air. The bass or contralto leaves the space between the cords wider open, and has to vibrate much more of the membranes.

If the Burmese husband and the Burmese wife come to the conclusion that they are not suited to each other, their procedure is simple and direct. The wife does not go to her solicitor, but to the tallow chandler. From him she obtains two little candles. These she brings home, and she and her husband sit down on the floor, placing the candles between them. One candle represents the husband, one the wife. They are lighted at the same moment, and the owner of the one that goes out first leaves the house, taking only his or her clothes, while the owner of the more enduring candle remains also the owner of the house and all that therein is.

Their Married Life

Helen's Cook Hears from Nora and Warren Shows a Wave of Tenderness.

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

The telephone tinkled softly, and Helen, who was dozing, half opened her eyes. She wondered vacuely who could be calling so early in the morning, but she was too sleepy to think much about it, and a few minutes more she had dropped asleep again. Some one touching her on the shoulder a few minutes later waked her suddenly, and she sat up to see Mary looking at her in an agony of fear last she wake Mr. Curtis.

"What is it, Mary?" said Helen, pushing the hair out of her eyes, and conscious that it must be something important to have Mary come into the room like this and awaken her.

"Can you come outside while I explain?" whispered Mary. Her plain, honest face was white with fear, and Helen slipped out of bed quietly and followed the maid out into the dining room, where they could talk without waking Warren. "What is it, Mary? You look so frightened."

"Oh, ma'am, it's Nora and Joe," said Mary, trying to speak in a whisper and almost failing in her strong excitement.

"Nora, and Joe," repeated Helen, with real concern. Nora had worked for her before Mary had come to America and Helen had always liked the girl. When she had married the man of her choice and had put sturdy Mary in her place with the Curtis family, she had left plenty of good will behind her in Helen's heart.

"Joe has been hurt," Mary explained as lucidly as she could.

"Hurt, Mary, how?"

"In a fight, ma'am. I don't know how it was very well myself. Nora was that excited she could hardly talk, but she wants me to come right over if you'll let me go, ma'am."

"Why of course you can go, Mary, but Nora must have said more than that about it."

"She did that Joe had been in some kind of a fight on the roof of their apartment building," said Mary, "and he was cut with a knife."

"Why, that's terrible, Mary. You'd better get into some clothes as soon as you can and go right over to Nora. What time is it, anyway?"

"It's fifteen after six, ma'am," said Mary. "I've got some coffee on the stove, Mrs. Curtis. Would you like a cup, or are you going back to bed?"

Helen could not think of going back to bed, she was wide awakened now and might as well stay up. She followed Mary into the tiny bath room and helped the girl get into some clothes. Then she poured out a cup of strong coffee for her and insisted that the girl eat a piece of bread.

SOME SOUND ADVICE.

"You won't be any good to Nora, Mary," she said as the girl struggled over the food, "unless you try to calm yourself and eat something, and be sure to let me know as soon as you can just what has happened, for I'll be anxious to know."

Helen saw Mary out of the door and then returned to her own room and carried her clothes into the guest room where she could dress quietly. It had been a long time since she had cooked a meal for Warren, and she entered into the spirit of it gaily, humming a little tune as she whisked the cereal into the oven to cook, and beat up some muffins. It was nearly 8 o'clock before she heard Warren stirring about and then she hurried in to him anxious to impart the news.

Warren stared at her in surprise, the sleep not quite gone from his eyes.

"Well," he said finally. "What are you doing up and dressed at this hour?"

"I'm cook this morning," Helen said laughingly, and then she proceeded to give Warren the facts of the case as she had heard them from Mary.

It wonder what could have happened," Warren speculated. "Joe isn't the kind of a chap to get into a fight for the fun of it, I guess it's nothing serious."

"Imagine, Warren," Helen put in, "cut with a knife. I never thought such things happened in fights these days."

"You don't happen to hear about them, that's all. I'll wager, though, that Joe wasn't at fault. I'll try to run up for lunch today if you think you can get something for me, and see what has happened."

"That will be fine, dear," Helen said enthusiastically. The excitement of the incident had gone to her head and the prospect of having Warren home to lunch when she was rarely allowed himself the privilege made her heart dance with joy. She wasn't conscious that she was happy at poor Nora's expense until Warren came out to the kitchen and tenagingly accused her of heartlessness.

"It's not that at all," Helen retorted shyly. "It's just that it's fun to have you here to eat food I love it. And then, besides, you never could tell Nora confessing to be so nice to have you today."

A TENDER MOMENT.

Warren smiled good naturedly and then his face suddenly became very tender, as though he were thinking of something he was sorry for. He crossed over to Helen impulsively.

"I suppose you think I'm a rather indifferent husband, don't you?"

Helen was so surprised that she hardly knew what to do. Her first impulse was to turn and slip her arms around Warren's neck, but her pext was to remain still in his arms and let him do what it was he had to say. But if he had any confession to make, as his attitude seemed to suggest, it impressed on his impulse the next instant, and, still keeping one arm lightly around her waist, he led the way into the dining room, not even waiting for Helen to answer his question.

Helen brought the breakfast in, and the meal was a strangely silent one, inasmuch as there seemed to be no need for conversation. Warren finally pushed back his coffee cup and rose to go.

"I'll be up at about twelve-thirty," he said, kissing her lightly, "and we'll talk over the entire thing. Don't worry—things come out all right. You might telephone if you hear anything important," and Helen was left with the consciousness that Warren had started to tell her something and had suddenly changed his mind.

The Provisions

The farmer walked into the little grocery shop with a firm step. "I want a tub of butter," he said, "and a lot of sugar, and all that other stuff."

"Good gracious!" said the widow, who kept the shop. "Whatever do you want with all them goods?"

"I dunno," said the farmer, scratching his head. "But you see, I'm the executor of your husband's will, and the lawyer told me I was to carry out the provisions."

SOLDIER IN 5TH BELIEVES JAM IS BLOOD

By BERT FORD.

Second Massachusetts Brigade Headquarters, El Paso, Tex., Aug. 25.—Private Ted Taylor, one of the most popular youngsters in the Fifth regiment, was put in the guard house over night and all on account of his tender heart.

But it was a mistake soon rectified. Mounted Orderly Worden Wood, the well-known marine artist, was the cause. Worden played a practical joke and had the whole hospital corps working desperately to save his life.

Wood had been to town shopping. Among other purchases he bought a jar of raspberry jam. Worden is as fond of raspberry jam as his sorrel mount Cleopatra is fond of loaf sugar. But the night was dark and the trail rough after the rain, and when Cleopatra put her foreleg in a ditch and shied, Worden felt the jar of jam in his blouse crumble against his saddle horn.

REFUSED TO HALT.

Also he felt the ooze, but he rode on. Sentry after sentry challenged him until he neared his quarters, when Private Ted Taylor loomed out of the dark with his sympathy.

"Halt—who goes there?" shouted Taylor sternly.

Mounted Orderly Wood of your own outfit, lad," answered Wood, but so faintly for him that Taylor strode closer and was astonished to see the artist soldier reel and clutch at his heart.

"What's up?" asked Taylor anxiously. "Nothing but a spig, that's all," replied Wood, feebly, permitting his knees to give. Taylor caught him and helped him to the nearest lantern. Wood tore open his blouse, poked in two brown hands and brought them forth covered with

Taylor waited to see no more. He appeared breathless at the hospital tent and reported that Wood had been peppered by a Greaser and was "bleeding to death."

WOOD GETS FIRST AID.

The first aid squad with bandages and ether and everything but a saw came on the run to find Mounted Orderly Wood prone on the ground, his eyes closed, face to the clouds, and his blouse and hands smeared with "gore."

"D—— sticky for blood," said a young surgeon.

Taylor remembered afterward that Wood's mouth twitched suspiciously at that point. The lantern was brought nearer and they were about to lay the dying artist tenderly on a litter when the medico yelled "Jam" and the death scene ended and Ted Taylor's prison duty began.

Wagoner Patrick T. Cotter of the Ninth, injured when a trolley car collided with his mule team, was reported comfortable and not seriously hurt at the Base Hospital today. The lead mules escaped but the pole pair were so badly injured that a policeman shot them.

AMES HOME IS ROBBED OF GEMS

Mansfield, Aug. 25.—State Detective John Scott and a corps of assistants have worked unceasingly since last night in an effort to solve the mystery of the malicious ransacking of the home of Edward E. Ames on South River road.

Drawers were pulled out of desks and tables and the contents scattered, while a desk in which Mr. Ames kept his valuable papers had been pried open with scissors and the papers as well as a number of checks, torn in small pieces and scattered.

Besides this damage more than $100 in money was taken and at least $1,500 worth of jewelry.

LITTLE HOPE FOR BISHOP SPALDING

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 25.—But little hope was held out today for the recovery of Archbishop John Lancaster Spalding. The aged prelate was reported to be sinking rapidly at his residence, and fear was expressed that the end is not far off. All the archbishop's relatives are now at his bedside.

The decree was issued presumably to determine the amount of taxation necessary to secure adequate revenue. Carranza officials will check up on all statements in order that there will be no "tax dodging."

Stocks Firm at Noon—Rails and Motors Weakest

Stocks were firm in New York at noon, the majority having advanced. Trading was of good volume during the first hour, but quiet in the second. Rails continued to be rather weak. This was due to the delay in settling the labor dispute. Motors ruled lower as a class. While commission house attendance indicated public interest in the market, there was not much speculating by outsiders.

Prices were irregular in New York at the opening, but more were showing gains than losses. Price changes were small. Inspiration sold within a few minutes at the record high price of 56½. Coppers were the strongest and most active class. Railroads had a downward trend. They were dealt in on a moderate scale. War industrials were quiet as a group. Marine preferred was among the weakest and Mexican Petroleum among the strongest issues. U. S. Steel opened 97⅞ and was soon selling at 97⅞.

In Boston Tamarack opened at a decline of two points. Calumet & Hecla has notified stockholders that its directors have decided that under existing circumstances it is advisable to distribute its holdings of Tamarack stock. Accordingly, a dividend of this stock has been declared.

The 20,000 shares which Calumet & Hecla holds will be distributed to stockholders of record of August 31 at the rate of 1-5 of a share of Tamarack for each share of Calumet & Hecla.

Trading was quiet in Boston. East Butte was the most active stock in the local list. Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies common was strong. The bulk of business here was in copper shares.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

CLEAN—WHOLESOME—REFRESHING

As an example of how the camera can be made to deviate from the truth this picture is remarkable. At first glimpse it appears to be the Moxie boy, who has acquired a girl in some way or other and become so familiar with her that she sits upon his knee.

To avoid a scandal we must admit that this is not so. If you will look closer you will discover that this is not the Moxie boy that everybody knows, but Ernest Truex, of the "Very Good Eddie" company, whose head just fits upon the body of the Moxie boy.

The girl is Josephine Harriman, the society dancer of the "Very Good Eddie" company. Again the camera is fooling you. Truex is a married man, and Miss Harriman didn't actually sit upon his knee at all. As a matter of fact Mr. Truex is very short and Miss Harriman towers over his head. If she sat on his knee you couldn't see Mr. Truex. What happened is that a clever artist transferred Miss Harriman from a perfectly respectable resting place upon a bench to the left knee of the Moxie boy, after sticking Mr. Truex's head upon his shoulders. This explanation is printed in the interests of all parties.

Miss Harriman, by the way, is a niece of the late E. H. Harriman, the railroad king. She is a Vassar girl, who became interested in dancing, studied with the Castles and went to Chicago where she soon presided over the very exclusive Gold Room Club of the Congress Annex. Miss Ann Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, and friend and adviser of Miss Marbury, producer of "Very Good Eddie," saw her and recommended her, hence her appearance at the Wilbur with "Very Good Eddie."

HAS HE REALLY SEEN THIS PLAY?

We will find out at 12:15 P. M. TODAY on the City Hall steps.

A distinguished Bostonian, who has been honored by his fellow-citizens with the highest gift in their power to bestow, has seen fit, in a weekly paper published by him, to assert that the wonderful film drama now being shown at a local theatre should be suppressed.

The question arises—Does he speak as one who has witnessed the play, or is his opinion a second-hand one? If he has seen it, and can prove it, thus showing that his opinion is a sincere one, five children's institutions of Boston will be $500 richer. If he has not, well, of what value is his borrowed opinion of

THE painter's canvas may register in minutest detail the one still picture his genius transfers to it. It may captivate and inspire. But it is one still picture. The speaking stage has command of several arts in addition to the painted canvas—but the theatre confines their compass and handicaps their range of expression. The canvases and powers of the moving-picture camera are limitless. As now utilized they transcend all bounds. They are capable of expressing and inspiring every mood and emotion. To follow their achievements is to be in a constant state of marvel. But in the Thomas Ince spectacle, "CIVILIZATION," we have a perfected accomplishment that dwarfs all previous cinema achievements.

The Important Thing to Do for the Boston & Maine

THE AMERICAN sympathizes with the attack which Mr. Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven and Boston & Maine Railroad system, made upon banker control of our railroads. It has been a very great evil in railroad history. The running of a railroad by the stock-ticker for speculative purposes has been the cause of most of the disasters which have wrecked our railroads, ruined honest stockholders and injured the business community which these railroads served. Banker control of the New Haven and Boston & Maine, together with its exploitation by the American Express Company and other special interests of that character, are responsible for the present condition of the New Haven and Boston & Maine. But there is no evidence that banker control is responsible for the present application for receivership for the Boston & Maine.

Mr. Mellen himself dismisses the idea when, after praising the splendid record which President Hustis has made in the management of the Boston & Maine, he says, referring to the receivership, "they (the bankers) should have tipped Hustis off to go slow if they had expected to put that through."

Mr. Mellen himself tells in his characteristically clear fashion the important thing to do for the Boston & Maine when he says:

> "The trouble with the Boston & Maine has always been that its fixed charges overbalanced its capitalization. It was built up of fixed charges, the leased line rentals and the floating debt, and its capital stock was left low in comparison.
>
> "Just think of it, the total dividend on its capital stock at 10 per cent. only amounts to about $4,000,000, and the fixed charges in leased line rentals and interest on the debt is two or three times that amount. It used to be that 25 cents on every dollar the Boston & Maine earned had to go to paying off the fixed charges.
>
> "That is not sound finance. The fixed charges must be reduced."

President Hustis, who is receiving universal praise for his able management of the Boston & Maine, agrees with Mr. Mellen that the present real difficulty is with the top heaviness of the Boston & Maine's financial structure and that the only remedy is to scale down the fixed charges. This is exactly what the reorganization plan recommended by Governor Walsh, Justice Brandeis, District Attorney Anderson, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Boston AMERICAN and every disinterested man and body that knew anything about the matter was devised to accomplish. Those who have been making the most trouble for this wise and necessary reform are Benjamin Kimball of Concord, New Hampshire, and Richard Olney of Boston, whose connection with our New England railroads have been very injurious for many years. These men, representing the Concord & Montreal and the Connecticut River Railroad, refuse to join with the other leased lines and come in with the Boston & Maine under the reorganization plans. These men insist upon their pound of flesh.

The extraordinary thing is that Mr. Richard Olney, representing the Connecticut River, should have the hardihood to oppose a reform so obviously sound and beneficial, in the face of the fact that the Boston & Maine paid his road 50 per cent. cash bonus at the time it entered into the scandalous lease which that road is now holding over the head of the unfortunate Boston & Maine.

Let the business men of New England consider what the lease which the Connecticut River is insisting upon means to the business interests of this community. The Boston & Maine has been borrowing money year after year to carry out the provisions of this lease, with its 50 per cent. cash bonus and 10 per cent. dividends.

The whole opposition to the reorganization is a hold-up pure and simple.

Mr. Mellen also suggests that there is danger if force is used that some of the leased lines will go to other railroads, possibly the Grand Trunk, the Canadian Pacific or the Delaware & Hudson. IF THIS SHOULD HAPPEN IT WOULD BE A VERY DECIDED ADVANTAGE TO NEW ENGLAND. WHAT WE NEED IS RAILROAD COMPETITION IN THIS COMMUNITY. We lost the great automobile industry and are losing industries every day to the Middle West because the rates in the Middle West are lower than our rates, on account of the railroad competition which they enjoy. The Boston AMERICAN fought very hard to bring the Grand Trunk to Boston, and when success had crowned our efforts, every legislative difficulty had been overcome and the opposition of the New Haven had been squelched, the sinking of the Titanic, with President Hays of the Grand Trunk, snuffed out the great hope of New England for restoration of railroad competition. The indictment by the United States government of the New York stock gamblers for criminal conspiracy to prevent the Grand Trunk from coming to Boston has not helped us to get the Grand Trunk, unfortunately.

We still need railroad competition and shall need it until the railroads pass into the government's hands. When will the United States take over her railroads and stop all this nonsense, waste and extravagance and corruption? Once we thought we had the most progressive nation in the world. Today the great nations of the world have passed us. They have taken over their railroads and their telegraph and telephone companies, and while we have been debating about purchasing ships, so that our business men and farmers could get advantage of freight service, Australia has gone ahead, purchased her ships and even now, almost immediately after the purchase, is able to make good her investment.

Why Is Hay Fever

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

FINALLY the mystery of hay fever was solved, or, at least, one side of it, by the discovery that the real cause of all this annoyance and discomfort—for, although its victims put a brave and cheerful face on it, the malady is anything but a joke—was neither a demon nor a germ, but the innocent and picturesque pollen of the flowers of certain plants.

The delightful and romantic scent of new-mown hay, with all its poetic associations, which had been incriminated in the popular name of the disease, was found to have very little to do with it. The real Brinkopian in the woodpile and hinc illae lachrimae (hence these "weeps") were certain flowering weeds, which blossomed just about the same time as the meadow grass or a little later. And while, as might have been expected in a disease in which nervous susceptibility plays such a weighty part, there are quite a number of different floral pet antipathies, and some are set sneezing by golden rod, some by plantain, some by false fever—few and a very few by the meadow grasses themselves. It has now been pretty definitely determined that something like two-thirds of all sieges of hay fever are due to the pollen of one pesky weed, the ragweed, known in polite society as Ambrosia artemisiaifolia. This is a dark green, dusty-looking weed, with tough wiry stems, about a foot or eighteen inches in height and deeply-cut, rather graceful, fern-shaped leaves. When it flowers it pushes up a short green spike, not unlike an erect willow or maple catkin, so insignificant and unattractive that nobody but a botanist would recognize it as a flower at all. The whole plant looks not unlike a stiff, dusty "dry land" fern, and it grows in patches along the side of the road, around the margins of fields, in vacant lots, usually in company with the almost equally hardy and abundant dog-fennel. It forms solid sheets over the stubble fields after the grain is cut; in fact, if you would just go out of doors anywhere in the late July, August or September and pick out the commonest weed in sight it would probably be Ambrosia aneaiflora.

With the discovery of the definite cause came the possibility of prevention and the hope of cure. The anesthesane most fortunately is a weed, both in the sense that it has no value and grows where its room would be more valued than its company, and also in the sense that it can grow only in cultivated soil or close along its margins. This peculiarity and limitation of the plant explains the comparative immunity from the disease possessed by the different zones of safety or much prized hay fever resorts. These, almost without exception, are up in hilly, mountainous or densely-wooded regions, where there is little or no cultivated land and no tame hay or grain and where the ragweed consequently has never yet got a foothold.

It also explains why so many of these vaunted resorts lost or, more accurately, destroyed their own reputation for immunity, because, as they became famous and popular and crowds of pilgrims resorted to them, either the real estate speculator got busy and proceeded to clear off the forest and lay out the hillsides in bungalow plots, or the mere gardens which were needed to grow vegetables and fruits for the crowds of invalids, or, worse yet, the fields of hay and grain for their driving and saddle horses provided a luxuriant seed bed for the irrepressible ragweed after its seeds had got carried in in hay or grain.

Not merely mountain and forest resorts had the reputation of being free from hay fever, but also the prairies of the Middle West and of the frontier settlements of the country generally. Thirty or forty years ago the prairies of Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota were comparatively free from hay fever, and victims who were cursed with a severe form of the disease after a trial Summer and Fall out West not infrequently sold out their farms or their businesses in New York, Pennsylvania or Ohio and moved out to the new Eden of safety. But, unfortunately, it was usually only a few years before they had to either celebrate again every Fall or else move on further west when the prairie sod had been plowed up and the grain fields and meadow hay of civilization had taken its place, with the inevitable ragweed on the side.

The other class of hay fever resorts were barren and sandy islands out in the ocean, where either no cultivation was attempted or the ordinary grasses and grains could not be grown and which were far enough out at sea to prevent the fatal pollen from being blown across from the mainland. Last and most curious of all, hay fever victims could often find relief by fleeing to a large city and taking a room in a downtown hotel or on one of the busiest business streets, for the simple and obvious reason that ragweed doesn't grow on city pavements, not even in roof gardens, whatever other weeds, literal or figurative, may flourish there, and there are no vacant lots for it to flourish on in the downtown districts, though possibly certain cities, after a boom, might grow it along with other kinds of grass in their streets.

Essay on Human Nature

THERE'S a hum of tense excitement in the office,
One is deafened by the clicking of the keys;
Clerks, disguised with looks of worry, add up columns in a hurry,
Office boys buzz in and out like swarms of bees.
You would think that if the heads of the departments
Kept their awful pace much longer they would drop;
All the porters are so busy that they fairly make you dizzy—
For it's Winter, and the boss is in the shop!

THERE'S a peace that almost passeth understanding
Brooding over all the restful employes,
Not a soul is in a hurry, no one has a care or worry;
Even office boys are wholly at their ease.
The stenographers are perking in their mirrors,
O'er the place a sweet repose is settling down;
Clerks, with tranquil, care-free faces, gas about the pennant races—
For it's Summer, and the boss is out of town!

Why the Earth's Speed

As It Rushes Through Space

Does Not Cool It Off

Garrett P. Serviss Explains to Reader That the Globe, Whirling Through Emptiness, Is Not Swept by Winds as Is a Man Riding in a Swift Automobile

By Garrett P. Serviss

"If the earth stood still, would the sun burn it up? This question is suggested by the following fact: A man standing still in a hot sun becomes very warm, and perhaps will be sunstruck; while if he jump into a fast automobile and ride swiftly through the rays of the sun, he will not get hot, and will feel the effects of the sun much less.—R. S. G."

THE amount of heat received upon the earth from the sun is not sensibly affected by the movement of the earth around the sun. The sun's rays are sent out in all directions around it, and if you imagine a shell surrounding the sun at the distance of the earth, every part of that shell would receive an equal quantity of solar heat per unit of area. Consequently the earth, no matter at what point it may be situated, gets continually the same amount of heat, except so far as the amount may be varied by changes in the earth's distance from the sun or by fluctuations in the intensity of the solar radiation.

The forward movement of the earth through a field of space which is everywhere equally filled with the solar rays does not affect the number or intensity of rays that encounter it. No account is here taken of the effects of composition of the motion of the earth with that of the rays, which we need not consider.

Now, take the man standing in the broiling sunshine and threatened with sunstroke, but who on jumping into a speeding automobile enjoys instantly a delightful lowering of his temperature. He is not escaping from any of the smiting solar rays, for they fall upon him as numerous as before and possess just as great intensity, but the motion of the automobile has introduced an important new element—wind. Strictly speaking, wind means air in swift motion, but a virtual wind, just as good for many purposes as the real article, may be produced by the motion of a body through still air.

The effect of the wind in lowering the temperature is due to the rapid carrying off of heat from the body. A heated body surrounded by still air soon heats the air about it, and thus, in a manner, chokes up the exit for the escape of its own thermal radiation.

The heated air acts like a blanket through which the short waves of the solar radiation easily penetrate while the longer waves of obscure heat from the body are entrapped. Thus the body becomes hotter through thermal accumulation. But when fresh, cool air is continually brought into contact with the heated body, the escape of the heat is no longer obstructed as it was before, and the temperature ceases to rise, although the influx of heat from the sun may be as great as before.

But the earth, rushing through space, which, as far as any sensible resistance is concerned, may be regarded as empty, experiences neither a real nor a virtual wind. In order to do that it would have to move through some resisting medium, like the air. But the ether of space offers no resistance, while as to the atmosphere, that is a part of the earth and is carried along with it.

Many persons seem to find great difficulty in understanding the relations of the air to the solid earth, on whose surface it rests like a transparent spherical shell. The air is retained upon the earth by the force of the earth's attraction, and this fact is in no manner altered by the fluidity of the air, which permits its particles to move freely among one another as the particles of a solid cannot do.

The air decreases in density the higher you go above the earth, and at a height of a hundred miles it becomes so rare that no artificial vacuum can be compared with it, and yet, even at that height, the ether allows it to whirl with the whirling earth without resistance. A very slight resistance by the ether would result in the sweeping off of the atmosphere, but no effect of that kind can be detected.

If the ether did offer resistance to the earth speeding through it, as the air resists an automobile, the effect would not be to cool the earth, but to set it afire. It would be a wind of flame. The speed of the earth in its revolution around the sun is, on the average, about 18½ miles per second.

A body moving at that speed through a resisting atmosphere would be heated up to thousands of degrees. If the earth should plunge into a cosmical bubble of air in space we should feel, during the instant that we could feel at all, that we had been shot into a furnace. The oceans would boil and flash into steam, and the flying globe, viewed from without, would resemble a meteor shooting through the sky with a train of fire behind it.

An automobile going at that speed would be burned up, for it is not the size or mass of the moving body that determines the intensity of the heat developed, but it is the velocity. So the man who on a hot day wishes to cool himself off by taking an automobile ride must beware of trying to attain the speed of astronomical bodies at the peril of burning himself up and disappearing in a puff of smoke.
